WIFE IS DYING IN TRAGEDY

Zachariah Talom of No. 754 Salem street, Malden, this afternoon shot and wounded his wife and daughter and then killed himself. His wife is seriously injured. She was hit twice, once in the hand and once in the breast.

Neighbors in the vicinity of Talom's home were startled late this afternoon to hear pistol shots. An instant later they saw Mrs. Talom and her daughter fleeing down Clark street, back of the Talom home. They were pursued by Talom.

Talom fired two shots during the chase. Mrs. Talom dropped. The neighbors ran to her. Talom saw them coming and fled. He was chased. He went to his home and standing in front of one of the windows calmly loaded his revolver a second time.

The people on the outside saw him step back. They heard another shot and then all was quiet. Someone ran for the police. They came in a few minutes. Talom was found lying with his revolver gripped in his hand. He was dead.

DE MAR MARATHON WINNER

Clarence H. De Mar, the young Dorchester runner, to-day won the greatest Marathon race ever held. It was the fifteenth under the auspices of the B. A. A. De Mar broke the world's record.

His official time for the twenty-five miles was 2:21:39 3-5. He beat his nearest competitor by three minutes and also took three minutes from the record established by "Tom" Longboat, the Indian, in 1907. Longboat's time was 2:24:24.

De Mar finished the last of the twenty-five grueling miles running fresh. He was in excellent condition physically when examined at the B. A. A. clubhouse, but when he was weighed it was found that he had lost six and a half pounds during the run.

De Mar was a favorite. He finished second in last year's race.

Madden Is Second.

F. J. Madden of the South Boston A. C., was second. He was three minutes behind De Mar, but at that his time was only seven seconds behind the record.

Edward Fabore of the National A. A. A. of Montreal was third, while the veteran "Bob" Fowler, who won the Boston AMERICAN Marathon two years ago, was fourth.

It is estimated that between 250,000 and 300,000 people witnessed the great race. The weather conditions were ideal. The bright sun and dust at the start bothered the runners for a while, but the sky became overcast before the foremost men reached Framingham, and from that time on everything was perfect.

The crowd at Exeter street to see the finish of the race numbered nearly 30,000 people. DeMar and those who followed were wildly cheered. At different points along the course large crowds gathered to see the contestants pass.

Cheered by Natick Girls.

One of the largest crowds at early points in the race was at Natick square. The streets were black with people at this point. Six special cars were ranged along the street. People packed them within and scores stood on the roofs. Natick high school girls were there with their class colors.

At Wellesley the college girls formed the greatest part of the crowd. They cheered the runners as they passed. "Bob" Fowler received a great reception as he plodded through the square and past the college grounds.

De Mar was well back with the bunched runners at the start of the run. He did not look like a winner until the foremost reached the top of Auburndale hill. Then he spurted. A mile beyond he was up with the leaders.

Up to this time the lead had been shared by Masterson of New York and Madden of South Boston. Beyond Beacon street and Chestnut Hill De Mar held the lead, although Madden and Corkery were pressing him hard.

Ahlgren Falls Behind.

For the first eleven miles of the race Alexis Ahlgren of New York was leading. He and Corkery were well to the front until the last five miles of the race. After that they weakened and fell back with the second dozen.

De Mar left the B. A. A. clubhouse at 3:47. At that time the crowd was dense about Exeter street. De Mar was escorted by members of the North Dorchester A. A., which club he represented. The party left in a sight-seeing auto. De Mar was cheered as he passed through.

One of the first to greet De Mar when he crossed the tape at the finish was Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor and his daughters followed the runners in an auto from the start. After the race De Mar made this statement:

"Of course I am delighted over my victory. When we first started I was afraid of the sun, but shortly after leaving Natick it became overcast and a cool breeze made me feel like a new man. I felt confident of winning if my legs held out.

"I don't know whether this will be my last race or not. I am very well satisfied with what I did. It is a great surprise to me to know that I beat Longboat. That I cannot understand. Everything was handled in the best manner by the race officials."

OPERA CHORUS GOES ON STRIKE

The sixty members of the chorus of the Aborn English Opera Company, which was scheduled to present "Thais" at the Boston Opera House at 2 o'clock, struck just before the time for the performance this afternoon. A settlement was made at 1:55 and there was no delay in the production.

The grievance of the singers, who are mostly from New York and a majority of them women, was that they were given only half pay for Holy Week, which is customary among operatic managers. The house had been sold out to-day and the performers decided that as there was a large audience eager to hear Lois Ewell sing the title role to-day would be an opportune time to demand full pay.

This is the fourth week of the opera's presentation in Boston, the company's season having opened here.

The men of the troupe went across the road on Huntington avenue and perched themselves on the fence opposite the structure dedicated to the Muses and the Drama. The women laid siege to the stage door, and all late comers who had not heard of the trouble were informed and called upon not to enter. One buxom damsel armed with an umbrella at shoulder arms was a very convincing argument that all who attempted to enter would "leave hope behind."

At five minutes of 2 the management called the angry songsters into the house and a settlement was effected, upon what basis was not stated. Manager Ross, who had summoned Sargent Aborn to Boston from New York last night, fearing trouble, simply stated that an arrangement had been made satisfactory to the chorus, and that the trouble occurred because some of the Italian members of the troupe had not understood that their contracts called for only half pay in Holy Week.

As the chorus did not enter until late in the first act, there was no delay in the performance.

UTAH CONSOLIDATED MANAGEMENT WINS

JERSEY CITY, April 19.—At a meeting of the Utah Consolidated Mining Company stockholders, proxies representing 201,658 shares were voted. The management was re-elected by a vote of 107,339 shares, compared with 94,319 shares voted by the Walker-Blaney interests. In the final checking the management lost about 13,000 shares and the protesting stockholders only about 4,000 shares.

KELLY IS HELD FOR KILLING

Former Councilman Coleman E. Kelly, familiarly known in South Boston as "Coley," was arrested early to-day charged with the murder of Jeremiah Mahoney of Somerville, following a quarrel that started at a wedding celebration to which Kelly was an uninvited guest, this morning.

Kelly is charged with having killed Mahoney by striking him with a brick. The affair occurred near the corner of C street and Fifth street, soon after 5 o'clock this morning.

Kelly, the police say, fled from the scene. He was arrested at his home after the police, who had been refused admission to the house by his brothers, had broken in the door. Kelly was in bed. The police say he was then somewhat under the influence of liquor.

Sorry for Mother.

Kelly said when asked for his story:

"Of course, I'm sorry I did it, but I'm more sorry for my poor mother. This will probably kill her."

In the home of Mahoney there is mourning for the loss of the husband and father. A widow and five children survive him.

There is gloom, too, in the home of Patrick Manning at No. 98 C street, South Boston, where last night was held the festivities incident to his wedding yesterday afternoon to Miss Sarah Coughlin, that culminated in the death of one of the bidden guests and the arrest on a charge of murder of an unbidden guest at the nuptial feast.

Edward Barry, twenty-seven, of No. 87 B street, South Boston, and Patrick Coyne, seventeen, of No. 27 West Fifth street, South Boston, are held by the police of Station 6 as witnesses. Kelly is held without bail and will be arraigned in the South Boston District Court to-morrow.

Kelly will be arraigned in the South Boston District Court to-morrow. When brought to Station 6 after his arrest he was asked if he had anything to say.

He said he would not talk until he had seen his mother.

As the police were told the story of the tragedy, Kelly came to the home of Patrick Manning at No. 98 C street, where there was a wedding party last night, uninvited, but with Edward Barry, who was a guest.

After he had been there a few minutes, the police were told, several of the guests objected to his presence and he was requested to leave by Mahoney. There was a long argument, and finally Mahoney and Daniel Manning pushed Kelly out of the house.

Trouble Was Forgotten.

The wedding party resumed its merrymaking and the unpleasantness was forgotten. The gayety lasted until 5 o'clock to-day. Mahoney left the house with Daniel Manning and started up C street intending to take a car on Broadway for Somerville.

As they neared the corner of Fifth street, Mahoney and Daniel Manning were confronted, the police say, by Kelly and Patrick Coyne.

Kelly, the police allege, stooped down, loosened a brick from the sidewalk and hurled it at Mahoney after a few words had passed between them. The brick struck

SOUTH END GROUNDS, April 19.—Tyler, the New England Leaguer recruit, was picked by Manager Tenney to face the Phillies in the final game of the first home series. The manager would have preferred to use a right hander, but there was none available, as Curtis's arm was still sore. The morning's promise of good weather was unfulfilled, a stiff east wind making it cold and disagreeable.

Several boys of the Buffalo Eastern League Club were in the grand stand. This team opens at Providence to-morrow and practised this morning on the Huntington avenue grounds.

Matters were fixed up satisfactorily between Cecil Ferguson and President Russell and the big pitcher will probably sign as soon as a contract is offered him. Ferguson is several pounds over weight and it will take him a couple of weeks to get in shape.

BOY IS DEAD FROM GUN SHOT

PITTSFIELD, April 19.—Edwin Mattoon, ten years old, and Fred Mattoon, five, were shot by the accidental discharge of a gun in the home of their parents in East Mountain road in New Lenox to-day. Edwin was instantly killed and Fred is badly wounded in the shoulder. Their mother, Mrs. Edward Mattoon, heard the gun, and, running to the kitchen, viewed a scene of horror. The father of the children is a carpenter and was at work in Pittsfield when the tragedy happened.

Raymond Mattoon, fifteen years old, ran a mile to reach a telephone and summon physicians.

Raymond had been gunning during the morning, and when he got home left his shotgun standing in a corner of the kitchen. He says he extracted all the shells and it is supposed that little Edwin found a shell about the house and managed to put it into the gun. Then the gun was discharged while the children were at play.

KIDNAPED GIRL IS FOUND WITH GYPSIES

SYCAMORE, Ill., April 19.—Elsie Paroubek, the little Chicago girl who was kidnaped two weeks ago, for whose return $500 ransom was demanded, to-day is reported to have been found with a band of gypsies near here. Officers in automobiles have gone to the camp.

FOUR CHILDREN SAVED AT FIRE

Four young children were rescued by neighbors and a policeman, and almost all the furniture carried out of the burning house by the same neighbors this afternoon when a fire was discovered eating its way through the living rooms and roof of the house occupied by Charles W. Franklin and his family at No. 1,102 Adams street, Dorchester Lower Mills.

While Mrs. Franklin was busy the children were playing in other rooms. Their names are Charles W. Jr., five years, Alice four and Dorothy two. Benjamin, the nine months old baby, was with its mother.

Edward Moore, a neighbor, living opposite, saw the flames shoot through the roof. He notified Mrs. Franklin. A neighbor sounded the alarm while others with Patrolman Dinsmore darted through the house for the children. Mrs. Franklin took out the baby. After the children were safe the neighbors started for the furniture, and by the time the fire department arrived most of it had been taken to the street.

The damage is $700 on the house. The cause of the fire is unknown.

DOUBLE DIVORCE TRAGEDY.

Mrs. Glover Tells All

The opening of the Glover will fight, and the sending of commissioners to Nova Scotia to take the deposition of Hattie Le Blanc, has reawakened public interest in the most mysterious of Massachusetts murders.

New England's most interesting woman, widow of the Waltham laundryman, who was slain in his own office at night, has consented to tell her story in the columns of the Boston AMERICAN. We have seen the story. It has never been told before. In all our experience we have seen nothing like it.

The trial and acquittal of the Le Blanc girl, now back in her home town of West Arichat, increased the number of Mrs. Glover's friends and sympathizers. It also served to double the number of her enemies and detractors.

Mrs. Glover feels that the time has come to tell all. "I must speak!" she says.

She will describe in the Sunday AMERICAN her girlhood in the Provinces, her arrival in Boston, her career as working girl and business woman, her first meeting with Clarence F. Glover, their courtship, marriage and success as partners. The narrative is thrilling from beginning to end.

This story of Lillian Marie Glover, prepared by herself, will appear exclusively in the Boston Sunday AMERICAN. The first instalment will be found in the AMERICAN of next Sunday.

Whatever your personal opinion of this woman, you will want to read her own story. You ought to hear it from her own lips. You can get it nowhere except in the Boston Sunday AMERICAN. Be on the safe side and speak to-day to your newsdealer.

DORCHESTER RUNNER FIRST IN GREAT RACE, BREAKS THE RECORD

fore noon. They sprang forward on the long grind at the word "get" from Manager George Brown. Contrary to custom, there was no starting gun fired in this race.

A bunch of six runners dashed to the lead. Stanley Root of Philadelphia led the six. The runners set up a fast pace and were well within record time for the first few miles.

The sun came out bright as the men were off. A light breeze fanned them, but the roads were dry and the dust bothered the men. Great clouds of it obscured them during the first three miles.

For the first three miles the men were strung out in this order: Root, leading; Ahlgren of New York, Sturgis of Boston, Carr of Berlin, and Bruce of Quincy.

At Framingham depot, five miles from the start, Ahlgren of New York was leading. The time at this point was 12:23, a minute behind the world's record.

Masterson Jumps Ahead.

Two miles beyond Framingham, Masterson of New York, who had been running in the second bunch, probably twenty-five or thirty yards from the front, spurted and took the lead from that point. He was fifty yards ahead of his nearest opponent, Corkery of Toronto.

Masterson could not hold the lead, however, for when the runners entered Natick Square, Ahlgren had again taken the lead. Close on his heels were Lasterson and Madden, the latter a young South Boston boy.

The time at this point was 12:45, nearly three minutes behind the record.

The square was black with people. The runners had difficulty in making their way through the crowds. Six special cars were lined up with people packed in and on the roofs of the cars.

Early Practice Sprints.

The special train bearing the runners rubbers and pacemakers arrived at Ashland at 9:35 o'clock. There were nearly 300 in all. Some dozen or fifteen of the contestants were already at the hotel and had been there for days. These were out early to-day for short practice runs. They were rubbed down afterward.

All of the runners partook of a light lunch as soon as they got to Ashland.

As soon as they got to the B. A. A. headquarters at the hotel they were challenged and then given their numbers. The numbers this year are different from before. They are white figures on a blue field, and are fastened to the arms of the runners.

Shortly before the runners started, George Brown, athletic director of the B. A. A. and manager of the run to-day, received an anonymous communication prophesying that Fowler would be the winner of to-day's race. The letter was as follows:

"You watch Fowler to-day. He is going to win without a doubt. I have predicted winners before and I predict this one."

The total entry number was 142, but several of the runners were missing when it came time to check in. The field included the best runners in this country and Canada, and every nationality was represented. The Indian runners were the attraction to the crowd and many looked upon them as sure winners. The Canadian group kept together, the veterans explaining several things about the roads to the new men.

The usual advance guard of automobiles left Boston early and South Framingham, the point where they were to pick up the race, was crowded early. The autos were to follow the race, but they were barred from Exeter street, where the finish line was established.

The runners looked to be in fine shape and almost all were ready to start the grind confident that they had a good chance. Johnny Hayes and Fred Cameron were at the hotel with their men and they were confident that they had the right line.

When the men lined up this noon at Ashland their numbers were as follows:

CAMORRA TRIAL ON AFTER A HOLIDAY

VITERBO, April 19.—The Camorrist trial of Enrico Alfano and his associates was resumed in the Assize Court here to-day after a week's recess over the Easter holidays. Luigi Fucci, one of the defendants charged with knowledge of Camorrist crimes, was called to the stand for direct interrogation. While Fucci is not specifically charged with implication in the double murder of Genaro Cuocolo and his wife, Maria Cuocolo, the carbineers gathered sufficient evidence to show that he was cognizant of the crimes. He was questioned about his relationship with the Camorra.

PLYMOUTH GREETS 700 C. E. MEMBERS

PLYMOUTH, April 19.—More than seven hundred members of the Christian Endeavor societies gathered here to-day for the annual Plymouth County convention. The Endeavorers made their headquarters in the Church of the Pilgrimage and overflow conferences were held at the Baptist and the Methodist churches. The officers elected were: District secretary, Wilfred O. Broadbent, associate district secretary, Miss Ida W. Hall. Two hundred and fifty of the juniors listened to an address by Miss Emma O. Nichols.

FEDERAL AUTO LICENSE.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Representative Peters of Massachusetts has introduced in the House the so-called automobile Federal License Bill. It makes interstate motoring possible without the necessity of securing State licenses, the revenues from the licenses to be sent back into the treasury.

A Mystery Solved

For years medical men have been seeking a cure for eczema, the most common and most stubborn of skin diseases. Some said it was a blood disease; some said it was the result of indigestion. It remained for one studious chemist to settle beyond any question that eczema in many forms is a skin disease and related in no way to a disordered condition of the blood. This same chemist experimented with many antiseptic, healing and soothing agents, but it was not until he formed the compound Cadum that he at last realized he had given to the world something that would bring relief to hundreds of sufferers. Cadum ranks to-day with the great remedies of the medical world. Its action is so positive that the itching of eczema is stopped at once. People who have itched and scratched for years find sleep and rest soon after Cadum is applied. Cadum is sold by all druggists at 10c & 25c a box. It is for eczema in all its forms, also for pimples, blotches, itch, tetter, scaly skin, eruptions, chafings, psoriasis, rash, sores, scurvy, scabs, itching piles, etc.

'COLEY' KELLY HELD AS SLAYER

Mahoney on the side of the head, felling him to the walk.

Manning at the same time was attacked by Coyne.

Kelly fled as he saw Mahoney fall and his companion also ran.

Manning ran to Mahoney and attempted to raise him to his feet, but saw he was unconscious. Then he ran for help, and Dr. Herbert Keenan of Broadway was summoned. He pronounced Mahoney dead, and said death was due probably to a fracture of the skull.

Kelly Is Arrested.

The body was taken to Delavan's undertaking rooms on Broadway, and the police of Station 6 notified. The reserves were sent out to look for Kelly and his companion. Kelly was arrested about 6:45. He was found in bed at his home by Patrolmen Debon and Hill and Reserve Officer Murphy. Debon asked one of Kelly's brothers if "Coley" was at home. The brother replied "No, I haven't seen him."

Debon replied, "Well, we will have to search the house, anyhow."

Another brother of the prisoner asked the policeman from behind the closed door of the house what they wanted.

Debon again asked if "Coley" was in, and the brother replied in the negative.

"Open the door and let us in," ordered Debon.

"Have you got a warrant?" he was asked.

"No, we don't need any," Debon replied and he added, "Are you going to open the door?"

"No," was the reply.

Then the policemen broke down the door and went to Kelly's room. He made no resistance, but accompanied the police to the station.

Prisoner Is Cool.

Lieutenant Sanford was examining witnesses of the trouble when Kelly was brought in and booked. He asked Sanford what was the charge against him. When told it was murder he did not appear to be disturbed.

Manning, who was sitting behind the desk, leaped up and pointing a finger at Kelly, shouted, "That's the 'murderer!'" Kelly winced, but was silent.

Sanford asked Kelly if he had anything to say.

"No, not until I have seen my mother," Kelly replied.

He again asked what the charge was.

"The man is dead and you are charged with murder," replied Sanford. Kelly asked:

"Is it as serious as that?"

"Yes," said the lieutenant.

Several of the guests at the wedding were brought in and identified Kelly as the man who had disturbed the festivities.

The police say that Kelly admits having thrown the brick, but that he says he did so in self-defence. Chief Dugan of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation has taken charge of the case.

Daniel Manning of No. 88 Gilman street, a brother-in-law of Mahoney and a relative of the bridegroom at whose house the trouble which led to the death of Mahoney began, told Lieutenant Sanford at Station 6 this version of the quarrel:

"I was on the stairs when Barry came in. Kelly, who had not been invited, was with him. I asked Barry who Kelly was and he said he was a friend of his and that he had asked him to come along. I noticed that both men were under the influence of liquor. I asked Kelly to take Barry out. "Instead of doing this Kelly went down stairs and began to look for trouble. Finally after a lot of talk he was urged out of the house with Barry. I followed them to the sidewalk and heard Kelly quarrelling with Jerry Mahoney. I said to Kelly: "Why don't you be a good fellow and go home and not raise any rumpus here? You don't know these people.'

Victim Was Going Home.

"Kelly told me he wasn't looking for trouble, but that his friend Barry had left his hat and coat in the house and that he wasn't going until Barry did. Finally they went away. Jerry and I left the house to go home. We were walking toward Broadway to get a car that would take us to Somerville when we met Kelly and a young fellow. Kelly said something, then he stooped down and pried up a brick from the sidewalk and threw it at Jerry. Jerry didn't want any trouble with the man and had turned away from him. At the same time the young fellow with Kelly went at me, but all of a sudden he stopped 'mixing it up' and ran. Then I saw Jerry lying on the walk and went over to him and tried to pick him up. He didn't answer me."

Kelly is a familiar figure in the section of South Boston where he lives. He is a freight brakeman on the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad. Of recent years he has taken a great interest in politics and was elected to the Common Council in 1909. He aroused interest in the council by his advocacy of measures to prevent tax dodging and was the author of a resolution for the appointment of a tax commissioner for Boston. He was active also in urging improvements for South Boston. He was especially interested in playgrounds. His brother, Lawrence, who is a constable in the office of the Street Commissioner, had served in the Common Council.

Aspirant for House.

Last Fall Coleman Kelly was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Legislature from Ward 13, but was defeated in the primaries. He is unmarried and lives with his mother and several brothers.

Mahoney, the murdered man, is survived by a wife and several children. In Somerville he was regarded as being quiet and not given to quarrelling. Manning also bears a good reputation in that city.

The news of the killing of Mahoney has thrown a damper over the continuation of the wedding festivities of the Mannings which were planned for to-day and evening. Patrick Manning, who is a teamster for a coal company, and Miss Sarah Coughlin were married yesterday afternoon. They had rented and furnished the tenement at No. 98 C street, and their friends had gathered there last evening to celebrate the event. There were plenty of refreshments, music, singing and dancing, and everything, those present agree, was harmonious until the arrival of Barry and Kelly.

James A. Roche, who was one of the guests at the wedding celebration, left the house a moment or two after Mahoney and Manning. He told the police he was only a short distance behind them as they neared the corner of C street and Fifth street. When he saw Mahoney drop to the ground he ran to him, and seeing that he was unconscious, went to the parish house of the Church of the Holy Rosary and summoned one of the priests to Mahoney's assistance. By the time they arrived, however, Mahoney had expired.

Responded to Calls.

John Coffey of No. 89 C street was one of the first to hear Manning's shouts for help after Mahoney fell. He was asleep in the front room of his flat in the second story, and at once went to the aid of the dying man.

"I was in bed when I heard shouts for help," said Coffey, "and got up and stuck my head out the window. I sleep in the front room, and as I looked out I saw a man laying in the street. I put on some of my clothes and went out. The man was where I had seen him from the window, and there was nobody around. I picked up his hand and felt of his pulse. The hand was cold, and I couldn't feel any beating of the pulse. I stayed there until the police sergeant came and told him the man was dead. The first thing I heard was the shouts for help. The man lay in the street for about half an hour before the police ambulance came."

The family of Mahoney is desolate by his death. He leaves a wife and five children. The eldest is Frank J., aged twenty-one, a cashier for the North Packing and Provision Company, at the Somerville plant. The youngest boy is eight.

Jeremiah Mahoney was well known in the neighborhood where he resided, having lived at the present home address for twenty years. He was employed as a car sealer for the Boston & Maine railroad and was assigned to the Fitchburg division. He had been very saving with his money and had prospered. He owned the house the family live in. They owned a grocery store which Mrs. Mahoney conducted at the corner of Joseph and Adrian streets, directly opposite the home.

MARATHON WEEK IN BIG CONTEST

By The CONTEST EDITOR.

To-day brought the annual Marathon run of the B. A. A. The candidates in that run have trained for weeks, some of them for months. It is a foregone conclusion in these fierce competitions that sound training is necessary to be a Marathon winner or among the first ten men in at the tape.

The AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest is now approaching a Marathon stage. Opportunity Week, which begins next Sunday, April 23, can be likened to a Marathon week.

The present week, just preceding Opportunity Week, is one of preparation for the actual crisis. It is training week.

The Contest Editor asks each candidate:

Are On the Line.

"Are you training hard for the Marathon struggle of Opportunity Week? Are you getting all your forces in prime condition for the grand effort? Is your campaign field thoroughly covered? Have you a good line on every one of your subscription resources? Are you ready for the word 'Go!' When you get the word next Sunday can you make a good getaway and keep up the killing pace?"

The pace will be killing, beyond a doubt. The reward for active work is too great and too certain to permit any sluggishness. Think what the most ordinary effort will accomplish under the Opportunity Week offer and its DOUBLE COUNT. For instance:

A candidate who turns in three three-year subscriptions under the regular rate would get a vote credit of 15,000 votes.

Under the DOUBLE COUNT of Opportunity Week he will be credited with 30,000 votes for those same three subscriptions.

This double count will be open to candidates during Opportunity Week only. Opportunity Week begins next Sunday, April 23, and ends on the following Saturday night, April 29, at 10 p. m.

The double count will not apply before Opportunity Week, nor after it. Nor will there be any more such Opportunity Week during this contest. Candidates can rest assured of that.

Chance for All.

Candidates who have not achieved a high standing in the contest lists so far now have the best chance of all to increase their voting strength. Those who take full advantage of the golden Opportunity Week are bound to get a big lead. They may pass the actual leaders. The latter have canvassed their fields pretty thoroughly. The low-standing candidates have plenty of territory still unworked. Now is their chance to makeup for lost time.

The Contest Editor again requests all candidates and subscribers to notify the Contest Department of any change of address, temporary or permanent. This is most necessary if candidates would retain their vote credits.

There's nothing like knowing what you want in this life. Take C. B. Wells of Roslindale, as an example. Mr. Wells is a District One candidate. He says: "I want that Stoddard-30 automobile in the District One prize list. I'm going to get it, too."

Mr. Wells is in the signal department of the Boston Elevated. He has signalled a "right of way" for himself to that automobile prize and doesn't propose to be sidetracked.

PREMIER SAILS FOR THE CORONATION

NEW YORK, April 19.—Right Hon. Joseph G. Ward, Premier of New Zealand, with Lady Ward, their son Gladstone, and their daughter, Miss Eileen, sailed for England to-day. The Prime Minister goes to London to attend the imperial conference which precedes the coronation of King George. He is a suffragist, but does not believe the women are using the right methods in England to get them the suffrage.

REFUSE TO BRING HATTIE LE BLANC

Hattie Le Blanc will not be brought to East Cambridge from her home in West Arichat to figure as a witness in the hearing of the Glover will case before the Supreme Judicial Court. That has been settled by the absolute refusal of Melvin M. Johnson and A. Finley Brewer, the attorneys who defended her when she was on trial on the charge of having murdered Clarence F. Glover, the Waltham laundryman, whose will is being contested by four of his brothers, to bring her here as a witness in the will case. They will have nothing at all to do with the will contest.

Attorneys for the contestants will, it is reported, ask the Court, when the case is resumed to-morrow, for a modification of the order for a commission to go to West Arichat and take a deposition from Hattie Le Blanc as to what she knows about the will. The question of a jury trial is also likely to be raised. At the same time the Court may announce the members of the commission which is to question the Le Blanc girl.

Council for the four Glover brothers will not say in what essentials they desire the order for the Le Blanc commission modified. Attorneys for the will are equally reticent. Under the present order the deposition of the girl will be an oral one and any objections made by counsel will be passed on by the Court when the commission submits its report.

MAY DIE AS RESULT OF FALL WITH LAMP

BELFAST, Me., April 19.—Henry P. Bailey, eighty-two, while carrying a lighted oil lamp, fell down a flight of stairs in his farm house at Head of the Tide, a few miles from here, early to-day. His clothing caught fire and his escape by way of the stairs was cut off by the flames. Bailey ran back and by rolling on the floor extinguished the fire that was burning his clothes, but not until he had received severe burns all over his body. He then made his escape through a rear window. The house was burned to the ground. Mr. Bailey's recovery is extremely doubtful.

RECIPROCITY IS HIT BY CANNON

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Ex-Speaker Cannon attacked the Canadian reciprocity agreement in the House this afternoon. He characterized the legislation as the most important to come before Congress since the act that authorized the war with Spain. "And yet," he said, "this legislation is being hurried through without opportunity to carefully consider it.

"I ask if there is any man within the sound of my voice on either side of the chamber who ever heard of the Canadian reciprocity agreement until it was sent here in a special message following negotiations between this country and Canada. The bill is identical with the agreement presented by McCall, and yet I want to inquire if there is any member of this House who was ever consulted before this agreement was reported between the two nations. I shall pause a moment for reply."

Representative Cannon stopped abruptly in the midst of his speech and looked around the chamber.

"I note," he said after a moment, "that there is no man here who rises in his place to say that he ever heard of this agreement until it was already perfected."

Mr. Cannon declared that he not only spoke in behalf of his own district, but of the entire 92,000,000 people in the United States.

"It would not meet my own approval," he said, "or maintain my own self-respect if I attempted to array section against section, industry against industry and farmer against factory men and railroad men, so I will vote against this bill from the broad standpoint that it is opposed to the best interests of them all. It is proposed here to-day to put into law, with but slight consideration, an act that will throw into the United States—a market for the agricultural products of 92,000 people—the products of a nation having but 8,000,000 people."

The farmers' free list bill was favorably reported to-day by a strict party vote without amendment.

The report charges the Republican party with having failed to keep its tariff pledges, and in support of the free list bill, in addition to Canadian reciprocity, says:

"While the Canadian reciprocity agreement is a desirable beginning of the greatly needed work of revising injurious tariff provisions it cannot be expected unaided to afford more than a fragmentary and partial relief to the people."

The report proceeds to show that the free list bill is in the interests of farmers and will recompense them for any inequalities that may exist in the Canadian reciprocity.

PATRIOTS' DAY PROGRAM FULL

The Patriots' Day program, exclusive of sporting and athletic events in profusion, was so broad and varied as to offer something to persons of the most divergent tastes in Boston and all surrounding towns, although Concord and Lexington naturally headed the list of attractions with their celebrations.

Peculiar significance attached to the celebration in Concord, by reason of the fact that it has three times in history been especially marked on this day. April 19, 1689, the militia of Concord was assembled to go to Boston and assist in keeping order. Sir Edmund Andros, Governor-General of New England, had been thrown into prison because of the enmity of some of the people, and an uprising semed imminent.

Patriots' Day takes its name, of course, from the events of April 19, 1775. And it was another great war, the Rebellion, which furnished the third notable occurrence in Concord. April 19, 1861, when the Concord company of the Massachusetts Sixth Regiment of Militia, at early dawn, went marching away to fight for the North.

At dawn the citizens of Lexington were awakened by a salute of thirteen guns, and at 5.30 a historic parade began. The flag was raised on the green soon after sunrise by the Minute Men, who at 1 o'clock gave a dinner at Town Hall in honor of the Varnum Continentals of Greenwich, R. I.

Dress Parade in Afternoon.

In the afternoon there was to be a dress parade of the two organizations, and in the evening another meeting at Town Hall. The Old Belfry Club's annual ball was scheduled for the evening.

In Concord the 1,500 members of the Boys' Brigade turned out for a parade and various patriotic organizations were celebrating the first organized resistance to England.

Under the auspices of the twenty-three survivors of the famous Salem Zouaves, Company J, of the Eighth Massachusetts, a large bronze memorial tablet to Brigadier-General Arthur Forrester Devereaux, their old commander, was to be unveiled in the Broad street cemetery in Salem, at 10 o'clock. The tablet is fixed on the family tomb, the body of General Deveraux lying in Cincinnati, O., where he died February 14, 1906.

The dedication exercises were in charge of Colonel Henry A. Hale, senior vice-president of the Zouaves Association, the eulogy being delivered by Major John P. Reynolds. An escort of honor to the veterans was furnished by the Salem Light Infantry Veteran Association and Company H, Eighth Regiment, M. V. M., the line of march being from the State armory on Brown street to the cemetery. Many of the veterans wore the old Zouave uniform, while others appeared with the regular uniform of the veterans, chapeau, cross-belts, side arms and white gloves.

The Day's Program.

A summary of the day's events follows:

DR. COOK OFF TO REVOLUTION

CHICAGO, April 19.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, erstwhile polar explorer, is on his was to El Paso, Tex., to see the fighting to-day, still declaring that he is the discoverer of the north pole.

"Don't you feel a little embarrassed now that you have confessed?" was asked him.

"Confessed!" he exclaimed. "Why I've never confessed! Great Heavens! You don't call that magazine article a confession. That was merely the editor's unfortunate way of putting it."

Dr. Cook diffidently admitted that he had "made some good newspaper copy" in his day and asserted that he expected to make quite a little bit more before he passed on.

COURTHOUSE FLIRT THROWN OUT BODILY

A well-dressed, middle-aged man who has annoyed women at criminal trials by attempts to flirt with them ended his career as a "masher", yesterday, when he was thrown out of court during a recess in the trial of Thomas Thompson, alleged "white slaver." He had been under observation for some time, but it was difficult to catch him. Consequently when court officers saw him leer at a woman in the back of the room and make some remark they lost no time in seizing him and ejecting him rather forcibly. He won't be back.

ST. JOHN VOTES FOR COMMISSION RULE

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 19.—The voters of St. John cast their ballots in favor of a commission form of government to go into effect one year hence. The vote was more than two to one in favor. At present the city is governed by a mayor and board of aldermen. Dr. James H. Frank was re-elected mayor without opposition.

DAUGHTER OF JOHN D. WEARS ANKLE BRACELET

CHICAGO, April 19.—Mrs. Harold McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, has set a style for society women of Chicago and other cities. She possesses a gold anklet, especially made, worn so far only to the exceeding interest of a few intimate friends who have been moved to a general discussion of this novelty in fashion. Mrs. McCormick bears the reputation of leading Chicago in presenting new styles. The anklet is not of the sort commonly pictured, a heavy hoop of metal resembling a handcuff. It is made of five tiny gold strands loosely caught together and forming a sort of ribbon from which hang a number of gold bangles. There are no jewels set in it.

EIGHT DROWNED OFF LUSITANIA

LONDON, April 19.—Dispatches from Cape Town this afternoon stated that the 800 passengers of the Lusitania had been landed by the British cruiser Forte and the government tug Scotsman at Simons Bay. Among the passengers were three Portuguese army officers who had been expelled from service at Lourenzo Marques and who were on their way to Portugal.

The Lusitania still lies in a dangerous position. Another dispatch from Cape Town reported that eight persons had been drowned in the transfer of passengers. A small boat capsized and four men, two women and two children were drowned.

The Lusitania reported aground is not the giant steamship of the Cunard line, but probably a small German-built and Portuguese-owned iron steamer of 237 feet in length. She was built in 1881 at Flensburg, is listed as belonging to A. E. De Freitas & Co., and her hailing port is given as Hamburg.

ANARCHISTS FROM AMERICA CAUGHT

TURIN, Italy, April 19.—Two anarchists, proved by papers on their persons to have been in direct communication with an American anarchist organization at Paterson, N. J., were arrested to-day. The police, in announcing the arrest said the men had come to Italy on an errand of assassination.

CRANDON HEAD OF S. OF A. R.

The Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution held its annual meeting in the Old South Church to-day. The reports showed a net loss of eight on March 31 of this year. It was stated that the membership loss had been made up.

Election of officers for 1911-12 took place with the following results:

President, Edwin Sanford Crandon, Cambridge; vice-presidents, Luke Stearns Stowe, Springfield; Luther Atwood, Lynn; Frank Ernest Woodward, Wellesley Hills; secretary and registrar, Herbert Wood Kimball, Waban; treasurer, Charles Montraville Green, M. D., Boston; historian, Brigadier-General Philip Reade, U. S. A., (retired), Lowell; chaplain, Rev. Lewis Wilder Hicks, Wellesley; managers for three years, Allen Henry Bagg, Pittsfield; Samuel Crowell, M. D., Dorchester; George Maury Rice, Worcester; Albert Francis Amee, Cambridge; James Edward Seaver, Taunton; for two years to fill unexpired term of W. W. Bartlet, Charles Edward Wiggin, Roxbury.

THINKS D. D. MAY BE "DEAD DUCK"

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 19.—Representative Otis Grange of Guilford is also a clergyman, but he does not think the degree of D. D. means much in some instances. A bill to permit a skilled bonesetter to practice his art without becoming an M. D. came before the Lower House of the Legislature. There was a hot debate. Then the clergyman arose and said: "I have seen doctors of divinity in whose cases I have often thought that D. D. might stand for 'dead ducks.'"

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

They Are Closely Observing Public Health Conditions

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that the reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of applicants do not even suspect that they have the disease.

He states that, judging from his own experience and reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has probably been more successful in relieving and curing these diseases than any remedy known. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of cures.

We find that Swamp-Root is strictly an herbal compound and we would advise all readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes—fifty-cents and one-dollar.

However, if you wish first to test the preparation, the manufacturers will gladly forward you a sample bottle by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper.

VETO POWER OF LORDS CLIPPED

LONDON, April 19.—With steam roller methods the government forces in the House of Commons early to-day advanced the Parliament bill, after an all night session.

Resorting to "closure," the Liberals forced a vote at 4:30 o'clock, passing the first or veto clause of the measure, which curtails the power of the peers in dealing with revenue bills.

The vote was 143 to 78.

The clause which was passed in the early daylight hours is one of the most important features of the Parliament bill. It puts so sharp a limitation on the power of the upper house to interfere with financial legislation which is promoted in the Commons that it practically leaves the House of Lords of the future powerless to resist any important fiscal reform introduced by the ministry in power.

The majority by which the closure was carried shows once again the solid strength of the united ministerial and Irish Nationalist parties. The Tory opposition, which is fighting for the interests of the House of Lords, had started on a brazen campaign of instruction against the Parliament bill by flooding the clerk's desk with a perfect shoal of amendments—numbering fully a thousand—the discussion of which would have kept the ministry night and day until next Christmas, thereby making all attempts at reform of the House of Lords futile and farcical.

Premier Asquith and his associate ministers saw early the purpose of this and took steps at once to put an effective block to all obstruction. Closure of the most drastic nature was decided upon and is being enforced with determination by the leaders of the government majority.

The decision of the government not to stand any nonsense from the obstructive opposition, but to push the Parliament bill right ahead by frequent and determined use of the closure, is receiving hearty assent from the local Liberal leaders throughout Great Britain. Everyone is waiting anxiously to see what happens to the bill when it reaches the House of Lords.

It may be that Lord Lansdowne and his brother peers may trim and emasculate the bill, so as to make it a weak and washy specimen of legislation, perfectly harmless as a weapon against the upper chamber.

But neither the British Liberal nor the Irish Nationalist leaders will consider any let up in the hammering campaign against the Lords in which they are now engaged. Both Premier Asquith and Mr. Redmond are alive to the fact that it is "now or never" between the people and the peers. Public opinion is strong with the people and nobody doubts for a moment on which side the victory will lie. It is not the people who will have to strike their colors.

The "Kangaroo" closure is making short work of the Tory showers of obstructive amendments. Every now and then the minister in charge of the bill rises and moves the closure. The House divides, the ministry wins and then the House proceeds again to its work amid howls of rage from the Tory benches.

It is the determination of the ministry to carry the bill through all its stages in the Commons before Parliament is prorogued just before the coronation.

The fight on the Parliament bill is closely linked with the fortunes of Home Rule for Ireland. No matter what the House of Lords may strive to do, this bill is bound to go on the statute book. Once its provisions are the law of the land, victory for Home Rule is as certain as the stars.

NAME WOMAN'S BEST QUALITY

CASH PRIZES IN WOMAN CONTEST.

"What is the most excellent quality in woman?"

Write your answer to that question to Eleanor Ames of the AMERICAN.

$20 in cash prizes for the best answers.

By ELEANOR AMES.

I am starting a fascinating contest.

The contest is to find out what reader of the AMERICAN can give the best answer to the following question:

"What is the most excellent quality in woman?"

Woman is called the greatest mystery of all. Keenest analysts of character, profoundest philosophers, most brilliant writers, have asked themselves this eternal question. Many have tried to answer it. They do not agree.

Every person is entitled to his or her individual opinion. What do you think?

"Goodness is the best quality in a woman," say some.

But will goodness alone, without intelligence or without charity or without amiability, suffice as the most excellent quality in woman?

When I speak of "quality," I refer to a trait of character, of course, not to mere beauty. Goodness is a quality, so is devotion, or thrift, or gentleness, for instance.

I made up a list of desirable qualities in woman one time, just to amuse myself. I noted sixty qualities that a woman should have, all desirable, some absolute necessary, as I thought, for a well-rounded feminine character.

But the question before my readers is: What is the MOST EXCELLENT quality in a woman, not the five or six most necessary, but the one "most excellent."

I am anxious to obtain the ideas of my readers, both masculine and feminine, on this point. I do not know whether men or women will prove the better judges.

But I can't find out if my readers will write their opinions to me. I will give prizes for the best answers, as follows:

For the best answer of all I will give $10 in cash.

For the second best answer I will give $5 in cash.

For the next best answers I will give $1 each in cash.

This is a total of $20 in cash prizes. The rules are simple:

Do not write over two hundred words. Any sound, clear opinion can be well told in that length.

In your answer first name the quality you deem most excellent in woman. Then tell why you think so.

Write upon one side of the paper only. Sign your full name and address.

Address answers to Eleanor Ames, Boston AMERICAN.

MILLIONAIRE SINGS OF LOVE

When a millionaire bachelor bursts into lilting lyrics about love he is bound to have an audience, and doubtless many a Lowell maid and matron will procure at the very first opportunity Frederick Fanning Ayer's book of verses, just published, "Bell and Wing."

Mr. Ayer is in his sixtieth year and this is his first series of flights on Pegasus. His friends say that he can only have spent week-ends on Parnassus, for he has had a very busy life as lawyer, millowner, and manager of the great Ayer estate. Nevertheless they are not withholding praise, and they profess to see in Mr. Ayer's verse many notes that show kinship of spirit with Shelley, Browning and even the elusive Oscar Wilde. Here is one bit that they say has the tenderness of Wilde:

[illegible] a sprite in love,
Take to [illegible] at first;
[illegible] is good enough,
[illegible] for quenching thirst—
[illegible]
[illegible] to cheek

The first grand ball of the Lenox employes will be held to-night. It is a democratic affair and everybody, from the dignified manager to the smallest bell hop, will be present at some time during the evening. As the dance lasts until 5 to-morrow morning there will be time for everybody to attend.

Found! 3500 Civil War Photographs
For You in 10 Big Volumes

THESE photographs were taken right on the spot while the war raged in the deafening roar of cannon and the hail of bullets. Mathew Brady, camera genius, followed armies and navies of both sides and took thousands of superb pictures. He died in poverty and the pictures have been lost for 50 years. Now they have been found again and at an expense of hundreds of thousands of dollars, we are placing them within the reach of the American public, in 10 beautiful volumes.

Before Publication at Reduced Price and Small Payments

The books are now almost ready. Until they are finished, we are offering sets at a low price for introductory purposes. If you are prompt, you can secure a set at this special before-publication price on approval and in small monthly payments, but you must be prompt. As soon as the books are finished, the price will go up.

Photographic History of the Civil War

GENERAL Grant saw them taken; William Pinkerton, famous detective, helped to take them; General Garfield and General Sickles valued them at $150,000.

Taken under the protection of the United States Secret Service with special permission from President Lincoln, these photographs tell a story of the war like none you ever heard before. They show no fancy artist's handiwork but the grim reality. Merry making in camp, lingering in hospital, lying in prison, spying on the enemy, hanging the Lincoln conspirators, manning the battleships, punishing the deserter, drilling the awkward squad, dead on the field of battle, fighting in the trenches—all is shown in this ever-changing panorama of these four momentous years.

Around these photographs, we have written an intimate story of the war, getting close to the men's lives, telling of the drama of battle on land and sea, the secrets of spies and scouts, the tragedy of the hospital and the suffering of the prison. It is an impartial story of the war. Eminent historians, veterans of the Union forces, veterans of the Confederacy, generals in the army today, admirals in the navy, military and naval experts are joining to make this the most momentous story of the war ever published and one which must be in every American home.

You Cannot Get Them Elsewhere At Any Price

JUDGES CONFER ON SHAW REPORT

Justice Stevens of the Superior Court is said to have conferred with his associates on the bench as to the advisability of making public the report of the Grand Jury which investigated the perjury and conspiracy charges against the Shaw executors, commonly known as the "tax-dodging" case. He is expected to render his decision to-morrow.

District Attorney Pelletier asked the court to make public the jurors' findings, but Judge Stevens decided to impound the papers for the present. It is known that the Grand Jury did not return an indictment against the three Shaw trustees, Quincy A. Shaw, the son and heir, Robert F. Herrick and Francis C. Welch. It is believed at the court house, however, that they included in their report recommendations for legislation which will make tax-dodging, either premeditated or unintentional, impossible in the future.

It was also said to-day that the city assessors who accepted the report of the Shaw estate which had been undervalued millions of dollars, were wondering if any reference to their action had been made in the Grand Jury report.

The duties of the Grand Jury have never been determined definitely in this Commonwealth. Some lawyers hold that it is for the Grand Jury to pass on the legal side of a case, and not the moral, and that if it finds no evidence on which it can act it cannot make an attack on citizens without rendering its members liable to the penalties of the libel law.

Evidence is said to have been given to the District Attorney's office to the effect that information was contained in the probate court documents filed by the executors of the Shaw will that would have given abundant hint to one anxiously seeking information regarding the status of the Shaw estate.

In the first account it appeared that the income from the property undisclosed in the inventory was $500,000, while that from the property that was itemized in the inventory was $250,000. The $500,000 income item is pointed out as a "reason why a further inquiry as to what that undisclosed property was should have been made."

SEES FOSS IN LINE FOR SECOND PLACE

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Representative Curley of Boston believes Governor Foss will be nominated for Vice-President in 1912. In an interview he said: "With the passage of the Canadian reciprocity bill by Congress Governor Foss will loom large as a vice-presidential possibility in 1912 and in my opinion only the nomination of an Eastern man for the presidency can keep him out of second place on the next Democratic national ticket. Should an eastern man be chosen to lead the ticket, my calculations might be upset, but with a Western man leading the ticket, Governor Foss in my opinion, is almost sure to be nominated for Vice-President."

GIRL KILLED BY TRAIN ON NARROW GAUGE

Miss Susan Woodward, twenty, of No. 11 Stickney street, Lynn, was struck and instantly killed last night by a Lynn-bound train of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad, near the Shepard street crossing, Lynn. The body was found lying beside the tracks by the engineer of a Boston-bound train just before 8 o'clock. A postal card addressed to the girl's mother in Nova Scotia led to the discovery of her identity.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 110

The Pulling Force of the Boston American

The remarkable pulling quality of the Boston American has been demonstrated to the complete satisfaction of the manager of one of the great national phonograph companies in Boston. He ran a three-inch advertisement offering to sell a disc for ten cents to anyone who brought in the advertisement, cut out. The advertisement had hardly appeared before it began to pull, and at the end of the next day he had sold 285 discs and to the buyers of discs had sold phonographs to the amount of over $400.00 besides. He is still hearing from the advertising.

All of which shows the American sells expensive phonographs as well as other things as high and higher priced. In fact, the American is an advertising medium for anytning that has desirable quality. Its circulation gain is larger than the gains of all the other Boston papers combined. The Sunday edition is selling far more copies than a year ago, and so is the daily. The Sunday touches almost the 370,000 mark, while the Daily has on several occasions passed 400,000 and averages over 380,000, rain or shine.

The Boston American showed a greater increase in advertising during the first three months this year than all the other Boston papers combined. It carried over 543 columns more of advertising than it did the same three months last year. All of which goes to show that it is measuring up to the masses of Bostonians and is proving the best value as a business getter to advertisers.

The editor of one of the great weeklies, in an address recently in Boston, said that newspapers such as the Boston American represented the people more truly than any other kind of newspaper. He cited the publication in the American of the situation in the New Hampshire Legislature, and said that it was the virile presenting of news such as this that represented the true function of a newspaper, and the newspaper which is most truly democratic is the newspaper which is most assuredly best for the advertiser.

If you would like to know further particulars as to the pulling power of the American, address Trade Aid Department, Boston American.

"Sheriff Bob" Chanler and New Pet

NEW YORK, April 19.—Sheriff "Bob" Chaler, former husband of Mme. Lina Cavalieri, has returned to his studio in this city with a ferocious looking Bermuda lobster with long spikelike claws. It was the first lobster the former sheriff of Duchess County ever captured, his experience having ben confined to sampling the Broadway variety.

Chanler during his sojourn in Bermuda studied marine life and painted rare flowers and fishes in the Royal Marine Museum. One of his best pictures is a study of an octopus painted from life.

His model was observed through the glass bottom of a boat and painted in its natural surroundings.

When seen aboard the liner Moltke he was in the best of health and spirits. There were three hundred tourists aboard the boat, and during a two days' stop at Bermuda the liner was converted into a bower of Easter lilies.

MILITIA OFF ON FAST HIKE

Passing in review before Governor Foss twenty squads of men from various commands of the State Militia, left the capitol at 10:09 o'clock to-day on a "hike" to Lowell. Governor Foss and Adjutant-General Pearson planned to be at the finish line when the marchers should troop into the Lowell armory.

The military marathon is the second in the record of the militia, and to the winners go handsome trophies presented by Humphrey O'Sullivan of Lowell. Each squad carried light marching equipment, consisting of rifle, canteen and haversack, with such food as they chose to provide. The squads were made up of men from all branches of the State service, including infantry, naval brigade, coast artillery and signal corps.

The officers in charge of the test of efficiency followed the marchers in automobiles and exercised a rigid examination all along the line. To win the "hike" a squad had to finish with each of its eight men in position and with full equipment.

There was much interest in the event, and the boys were cheered by a large crowd as they left the east side of the State House and in each of the towns through which they passed they were heartily greeted.

Last year the contest was won by Company F, Fifth Infantry of Waltham. This year the entries included: Company B, Fifth Regiment, Charlestown; Company F, Fifth Regiment, Waltham; Company H, Fifth Regiment, Charlestown; Company L, Fifth Regiment, Malden; Company C, Sixth Regiment, Lowell; Company C, Eighth Regiment, Cambridge; Company M, Eighth Regiment, Somerville; Company I, Ninth Regiment, Boston; Company A, Naval Brigade, Boston; Company E, Naval Brigade, Lynn; Company F, Naval Brigade, Fall River; Company I, Naval Brigade, Fall River; Second Company, C. A. corps, Boston; Seventh Company, C. A. corps, Providence; Eleventh Company, C. A. corps, Boston; Signal Corps, Charlestown; Second Company, C. A. C., Providence.

The judges were: Colonel J. J. Sullivan of the Ninth; Colonel George H. Priest of the Sixth, and Colonel Colby T. Kittredge of the Paymasters Department. Surgeon General Charles C. Foster and six surgeons took care of the men along the line of march. Captain George W. Peterson of the Sixth, assisted by other officers of his regiment, had charge of arrangements.

FOSS REVIEWS WAR VETERANS

LOWELL, April 19.—Governor Foss was the most conspicuous figure among the many Massachusetts men who were here to-day to take part in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the day when the Old Sixth Regiment marched through the streets of Baltimore on the way to Washington to save the capital from capture by Confederates and was attacked by a mob of Southern sympathizers.

The city was thronged with strangers and buildings are gaily decorated. It is Lowell's greatest day, for the men of the Sixth came from this vicinity, and it was regarded as a Lowell regiment. Survivors of the command were honored guests of the city and hailed everywhere as heroes. There are not many members of the old Sixth now alive, but among the few is Colonel Edward F. Jones of Binghampton, who is a former Lieutenant-Governor of New York and famous as "Jones; he pays the freight."

Colonel Jones and his comrades were escorted through the streets by United States troops, the Sixth Infantry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, by Spanish War veterans, and by thousands of their fellow members of the Grand Army of the Republic, together with scores of semi-military and civic societies. Practically every organization of that kind in Lowell was in line in the great parade.

Governor Foss was a speaker at the celebration. He said the men of the old Sixth were heroes and entitled to the utmost homage, but no old hostilities should be kept alive. He said he believed the tendency to arbitrate difficulties would in time make war impossible. He said:

"Let us do what we can to hasten that time. We cannot comprehend to-day the horror of the time when brothers aimed their bullets at each other and sons and fathers fought to kill. The strongest forces of our times are acting to oppose warfare. There is the growing spirit of humanity and brotherhood, the intelligent understanding of ourselves and others, the instant spread of news to all parts of the world by which great pressure can be brought to bear to solve the difficulty without recourse to arms.

"But most of all there is the growing sense of world-wide unity through trade and travel. The people of Europe are now our friends and customers. Trade treaties which unite the whole Anglo-Saxon race firmly enough together will make wars practically impossible between the parties to such an alliance.

"So while we still remember and give homage to our friends and brothers who laid down their lives upon the battle field, let us remember that he, too, can give our lives—not in a battle—but in life-long efforts in the cause of peace."

SPANISH VETERANS CONVENE AT LOWELL

LOWELL, April 19.—State conventions of the Spanish War Veterans and the Ladies Auxiliaries which opened here last night, met to-day for the election of officers. The veterans' convention was opened in the State Armory, on Wes ford street, and that of the ladies' auxiliaries in the Father Mathew Temperance Institute Hall, on Dalton street.

The convention of the Spanish War veterans was called to order by Henry J. McCammon of Watertown, department commander.

TELEPHONE CABLE TO LINK 3 CITIES

The big proposition of connecting Philadelphia, New York and Boston by a great underground telephone cable has been started by the American Telephone Company. The plan has been perfected to keep Boston and New York in connection with Washington during times of national importance when overhead wires would be torn down by storm and snow. This will be the longest underground telephone connection in the world.

NO MEDDLING, SAY MEXICANS

MEXICO CITY, April 19.—Mexico will not tolerate intervention by the United States. This was made clear to-day by a statement given to the National News Association by Francisco de la Barra, Minister of Foreign Affairs and former Ambassador. It was called forth by reports that the Diaz government was trying to force intervention by conducting battles close to the border. In his statement the minister blames "individual Americans" for abetting the revolution. His full statement follows:

"The Mexican government neither has solicited, nor will solicit, the intervention in its affairs of the American government or that of any foreign power, as such a step would not only be entirely opposed to the patriotic sentiment which animates it, but also derogatory to its dignity. This statement, I am convinced, reflects the sentiment of the whole country irrespective of party or politics. Moreover, the government counts on a force sufficient to check the present revolutionary movement, a movement mainly abetted by individual Americans. The declaration of President Diaz and the conduct of his government have revealed the high and patriotic purpose which inspires them.

"On the other hand, the government and the people of the United States of America, animated by a feeling of friendship for Mexico and convinced that our policy is fair and loyal and that it is based on the principles and practices of international law, cannot possibly entertain ideas of such intervention."

The insurrectos have captured Santiago, Papasquiaro, after a battle in which 100 men were killed.

MEXICAN "JOAN OF ARC" WITH REBELS NEAR AGUA PRIETA

AGUA PRIETA, Mexico, April 19.—The rebel forces which were forced to evacuate this town after yesterday's battle, were reinforced by two columns, approximately 500 men, many of them cowboys from the American side. Another attack is expected at any moment.

In command in one force is Juan Cabral, and with him is the Mexican "Joan of Arc," Senora Talamantes.

Citizens report the concentration of insurrectos in the mountains awaiting word to join the attacking party.

The ports of Agua Prieta, and Douglas, Arizona, have been formally declared open.

Woman Held as Hostage.

The conduct of the rebels during the past week has been brigandage, not war, pure and simple. An American doctor and his wife were held by high rebel officials until the physician could secure indorsement from friends of a draft of $1,000. His wife was held as hostage until he secured the cash and turned it over to the officers.

Silver bullion to the amount of $10,000 was forcibly taken from the Bacis Mining Company in the State of Durango. Within twenty-four hours it was voluntarily returned. The company is an English concern.

Papasquiaro, in Durango, is said to have been attacked by a band of fifty. The Federal troops met the band outside the town and routed them.

Boys Rout Brigands.

Hintanas, also in Durango, is reported to have been sacked. The raiders later engaged in a fight among themselves, five of them being killed.

Six men are reported killed in an engagement with volunteers on the hacienda of Santa Rosalia, near San Puan del Rio. The volunteers were victorious, but the raiders resumed their depredations on the haciendas.

In Puebla, Chiautla, a mining town and trade centre, is still in the power of the rebels, but a body of Federals, under Colonel Blanquet, is marching on the town.

In the State of San Luis Potosi, which until lately has been unaffected, a band of six men were raiding the Calvellinas Hacienda, when a boy of eighteen led half a dozen young men against them. Beginning the fight with the cry: "You are not rebels; you are highwaymen," the youths overpowered the band and carried their prisoners before the authorities.

C. T. A. U. HEARS OF WORK ON BAR BILL

How the organization was a factor in having the Bar and Bottle bill enacted into law was told by John T. Shea of Cambridge at the thirty-fifth annual convention of the Boston Catholic Total Abstinence Union in Columbus Hall, Malden, to-day. He said in his report that organized effort and concerted action must always become effective in the common endeavor of many men, especially in the total abstinence movement.

The convention opened with a solemn high mass in the Church of Immaculate Conception, the celebrant being the Rev. Richard Neagle, P. R. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Maurice J. O'Connor of St. James Church, Boston, chaplain-general of the union.

BACHELOR GIRLS' PRESIDENT TO WED

BROCKTON, April 19.—Miss M. Ethel Corcoran, a music teacher who four years ago founded and became president of the Brockton Bachelor Girls' Club, whose motto is "Never Marry," has announced her engagement, and it is feared the club will be forced to disband, as several of the young women are expected to follow suit within a few weeks. Miss Corcoran invited the club girls to her home, where a luncheon was served last night. At the close she announced she was engaged and would soon be married to T. Henry Pegnam of Rockland.

SIX HURT IN RAILROAD WRECK AT SIMSBURY

WINSTED, Ct., April 19.—Six persons were injured as the result of a rear-end collision on the Central New England Railway half a mile west of Simsbury late yesterday. The road was blocked all night. Two men passengers named Gilbert and Thomas living at No. 64 Willard street in Hartford, also a Mrs. Earl of Hartford, were painfully hurt, but none of them received any fractures, except Mrs. Earl, who had her nose broken. She is also suffering from shock. Three cars were wrecked and one was hurled down an embankment.

LOST CHILD FOUND ASLEEP IN CHURCH

While policemen, firemen and citizens were searching for Edna Sweeney, ten-year old daughter of Mrs. Edward Sweeney of Quincy, she was sleeping in the choir loft of the Church of the Sacred Heart. She left the Quincy school at noon, but did not go to her home on the boulevard. The searching party found children who had seen Edna go into the Church of the Sacred Heart at 4:30 o'clock. Then she was located.

REBELS OPPOSE U. S. INVASION

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

Editorial Correspondence of the AMERICAN.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—There was a Democratic flurry at the Capitol over the suggestion that the President was not unwilling to precipitate a war with Mexico for political reasons. It was recalled that the war with Spain saved McKinley his second term and delayed Democratic panics for a decade.

It was argued also by some of the apprehensive ones of the Democracy that a foreign war is the only thing under the sun that could re-elect President Taft and save the Republican administration.

Of course, no one who knows Mr. Taft in either party would accept the monstrous idea that the President would sacrifice so much of life and property for merely selfish ends.

I have spent the day, therefore, looking into the facts and probable conditions of such a conflict. While it is not possible at a time like this to go directly to the departments and to secure official information, there are many channels through which a great newspaper can secure information which is just as accurate as if it were official. The AMERICAN may be relied upon as authentic.

Ninety Per Cent. in Rebellion.

This is the situation in brief in Mexico: Ninety per cent. of the people are accurately estimated to be in rebellion against the Diaz government. Careful observers estimate that this ninety per cent. also represents the element which is antagonistic to the United States. The opposition to the Diaz government, among other things, is based upon various concessions of property and mines which the Diaz government has made to Americans and other foreigners.

The map of Mexico is spotted and marked like a smallpox patient with the locations of vast interests and property owned by foreigners. There is no country in the world in which so many foreign interests are represented in vast properties. From the Guggenheims on the north, to the Standard Oil possessions at Tuxpan in the East, the country is literally seamed with foreign investors.

Americans and others feel that in the investments they have carried capital and employed labor and paid labor good wages in Mexico, and it is said that the Diaz Government acted upon this idea. But the Mexican people, full of sentiment and always sensitively jealous of their American neighbors, keenly resent it. At any rate, it may be set down as definitely true that the vast percentage of the people of Mexico are just as antagonistic to the United States as they are to the Diaz Government.

How the Revolution Spread.

The insurrection in Mexico was first heard of on the twentieth of November, and for a while was confined to thirteen places in the Central Valley. On the tenth of December it was reported to be practically suppressed. In January it was continued almost to Comstock and Gallina on the border, with some socialist outbreaks in Lower California. In February it had broken out again all along the northern border, and was followed by outbreaks in the southern part, near the City of Mexico.

In November there were only about 800 insurrectos in arms through the republic, while Mexico had 11,500 federal soldiers to control it.

At the present time there are 18,000 insurrectos in the field, representing twenty-one out of the twenty-seven states and provinces, and the federals have only 23,000 men altogether to oppose to them. These figures will give some idea of the rapidity with which the revolution has grown and is still growing.

It is believed in army circles that if the United States should intervene in Mexico and send an army across the border it would have the same influence as an interference with a man who was beating his wife, who would both turn upon the intruder.

And so these experts have no doubt that the first shot fired by our country in intervention or invasion would unite the entire ninety per cent. of the insurrectos jointly antagonistic to Diaz and the Americans with the Government and the Federal troops in a solid army of defence against our intrusion.

Would Make Army of 23,000.

Here, then, to begin with, would be an army of 23,000 Federal troops and 18,000 insurrectos, making over 40,000 Mexicans already in the field with which our army of intervention or invasion must compete.

Let us see then how well prepared we are for a war like this, what forces we have on hand to conduct it.

The standing army of this Republic is 80,000 men. Of these we have 17,000 in foreign countries. We have 20,000 in the coast artillery and defence battalions. This leaves us only 43,000 men, including the hospital corps, the signal corps and the attendant bodies which reduce it by about five thousand more.

Of this total available army we have at this time 4,000 men at Galveston, 10,000 men at San Antonio, which is not on the border, and a part of the Third, Fourth, Sixth and Twelfth Cavalry, 2,000 in all, with 1,200 men at San Diego.

We have altogether about 3,500 men on the border and about 15,000 in nearby reserve.

The question is, would this equipment be sufficient to justify us in engaging in a war with Mexico which might result from intervention?

Army experts who have given this matter very serious consideration, and whose names, if they could be mentioned, as for obvious reasons they cannot be mentioned, would give conclusive force to the estimate, declare that to meet the immediate consolidation of the two Mexican armies with the swift reinforcements which would come to their ranks against a common national enemy, the Americans would imperatively need sixty thousand men as an army of advance from the border to the twenty-fifth parallel—from Las Pas, Lower California, to Monterey or Saltillo.

Would Need Reinforcements.

But this army of advance would need to be reinforced by as many or even more men to guard the line of communications and to prevent the swarming bands of Mexicans from burning bridges, destroying forts or wrecking the supply trains which would be absolutely necessary to support our troops on the march, as they could not live on the country through which they passed.

This would mean 60,000 more men to guard the lines of communication.

If this estimate seems large, let us consider the figures. Taking the mileage from La Pas to Monterey, 60,000 men would only mean twelve men to the mile. It is interesting in this connection to recall the fact that General Schenck had in the Shenandoah Valley in 1863 126 men to the mile, and even with this defence was censured by the government at Washington for the frequency with which his bridges were burned and his communications destroyed.

If we should advance in flank movement upon Vera Cruz to Mexico City, we should probably require an army of at least 40,000 in advance, and as many in the rear passing through a country more malarial than the worst regions around Havana and Santiago in the Cuban war.

300,000 Men Required.

Taken all together these army and navy experts who were willing to talk freely, but unofficially, at the capital, believe that in case of war with Mexico, which would follow upon intervention, this country would require no less than 300,000 men of offence and defence.

Incidentally it stated that, owing to the unwholesome conditions of the country, would find it dangerous to health to advance during the approaching Summer. This would leave the Mexicans until October to recruit their army and to prepare their lines of offence and defence.

Suppose, say these men, that our intervention and invasion of Mexico should be succeeded and we should be charged with the responsibility of ruling the country and of preserving order until a stable government could be established.

GERALDINE FARRAR, AT PIER WHEN LORD CAMOYS EMBARKED

CAMOYS SAILS; FARRAR AT PIER

NEW YORK, April 19.—Lord Camoys, who has been here since the wedding of Vivian Gould to Lord Decies, is bound for England aboard the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II. He expressed regret at leaving New York for even a few weeks. Some time ago Lord Camoys declared that he had lost his heart to an American girl, whom he described as the most beautiful in the world.

"I shall not stay away from New York longer than I can help," he said, "and I can assure you that there is no one in England that I am going to marry. The lady whose beauty I described some time ago is not on board this ship just now. You'll hear more of me when I return in July."

Miss Farrar the Girl?

It was whispered that Geraldine Farrar, the opera singer, is the girl to whom he referred. She happened to be on the pier when Lord Camoys spoke, waving a farewell to her father, Sidney Farrar. As the liner steamed out to mid-stream the prima donna ran down to the string piece to get as near to the liner as she could and wave one last farewell. She had never shown such eagerness to bid her father goodbye before.

Enrico Caruso sailed minus $100,000 which he lost due to his sore throat. The loss of the money seemed to make him somewhat downcast and he was not very amiable. His bodyguard from the Knickerbocker was with him.

Caruso Answers Miss Garden.

The tenor took advantage to deny that he was superstitious and that his breaking his engagement with the Metropolitan was due to a fortune teller.

"Mary Garden says I'll quit singing because a fortune teller frightened me," he said. "She says I am ignorant but the truth is that ignorant people are trying to advertise themselves by telling lies about me."

The Countess Bernstroff, wife of the German ambassador to the United States, and her son, also sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., as did Andreas Dippel, conductor of the Chicago Grand Opera, and his wife. The conductor said he is going abroad to watch for new talent.

The German ambassador, who came from Washington to bid his wife goodbye, denied the rumor that he expected to resign his post soon, and said he did not expect to be recalled.

ASK COURT TO ORDER AN INVESTIGATION

Allegations of unlawful and corrupt expenditures are made in a petition by fifty Hyde Park property owners, heard in the Superior Court, equity session, with regard to the purchase by the town of the Hyde Park Water Company's plant for $468,000. The petition was only another step in the fight over the water system which stirred Hyde Park for many months. Already two suits have been started. One of them, which alleged fraud in the purchase transactions, was dismissed by Judge Braley of the Supreme Court. The other suit, brought to vacate the sale of the plant to the town, is pending.

PENNSYLVANIA BISHOP TO RESIGN HIS OFFICE

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.—Bishop Alexander McKay-Smith of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Pennsylvania announces that he intends to resign on account of ill-health. He will ask the coming diocesan convention to elect a coadjutor bishop and a suffragan bishop. His resignation is to take effect within one year after the consecration of the coadjutor bishop. Bishop MacKay-Smith is a native of New Haven, Ct. He attended St. Paul's School at Concord, N. H., and was graduated from Trinity College, Hartford, in 1872. After his ordination to the priesthood, in 1877, he was connected with Grace Church, South Boston, for three years.

MORE BOUQUETS FOR LOMASNEY

Speaker Joseph Walker of the House has joined the Martin M. Lomasney Bouquet Club, membership in which is restricted to political opponents of the Ward 8 leader, and which has become the latest and most popular organization in Boston's political life. The Speaker handed his garland of verbal praise to Mr. Lomasney at the fifth annual dinner of the Mercantile Market Association, but unlike the bouquet presented to Mr. Lomasney a day or two ago by the Good Government association, this one had no half brick of denunciation hidden amid the flowers of praise.

Shivered at First.

Thomas F. Lomasney is president of the association. He is a cousin of the Democratic leader in the House and perchance it was that fact that inspired Speaker Walker to say.

"The name of your president gave me cold shivers at first, as I thought of a time when I used to fear one of that name was to be Speaker on Beacon Hill. But no better man ever served in the Legislature."

Martin M. Lomasney was not present but Cousin Tom beamed.

The Speaker went on to say:

"I am heartily in favor of Canadian reciprocity and I think our tariff should be forgotten to help a sister nation like that. I am opposed to the Federal income tax. I believe in its use for the States.

"We ought to return to direct nominations and lay aside party conventions, which are fast becoming obsolete. We should elect United States Senators directly.

"I believe in paternalism. It is nothing but paternalism applied to Christianity."

The Mayor entered shortly after this and was introduced. He dwelt mostly on his Dearo days in the North End and gave a toast for the citizens of Massachusetts, "Sacrifice," and the motto, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." He urged that to-day be made a day of reflection on the sacrifice that the men of former times made for their country. In passing, he gave a beautiful tribute to William M. Olin, late Secretary of State for the Commonwealth.

Treadway Declared Himself.

"Although I do not want to say anything against Rockefeller, Schwab and others," said the Mayor, "William M. Olin meant more to America than they, and he was buried with honors such as a Rockefeller could never have."

President Treadway briefly outlined the different important measures that are now before the Legislature. He said he hoped the new Boston charter would become another corpse in the Senate "graveyard."

"To my mind," he continued, "this is not the time to propose amendments thereto, especially when the form of amendment now before the Legislature is admittedly not to improve the government of Boston, but rather to aid men dealing with the government of the city from the standpoint of political advantage. I can conceive of no other motive for the move to enlarge the City Council from nine to twenty-seven members."

Police Sergeant M. J. Crowley, who has put in not a few of his years in the market district, sang John T. Kelley's song, "Tim Toolan," with cheers for President Lomasney inserted where Toolan usually gets them—a feature which took with the assembled marketmen.

NURSE IS BRIDE OF A PATROLMAN

Patrolman Edward McMahon of Roxbury to-day leads to the altar Miss Mary Agnes Long of No. 6 Jewel place, Roxbury, their wedding being the climax of a romance which started in 1908 when McMahon, wounded in the battle with the Jamaica Plain bandits, was nursed back to health by Miss Long.

McMahon was seriously wounded in the fight that was waged between the police and the bandits in and around the Forest Hills cemetery.

He was taken to his home and from the beginning, one of his most devoted nurses was Miss Long. When he recovered all the credit of his recovery was given to her. The patrolman laid siege to the heart of his nurse and won.

The marriage ceremony is celebrated by the Rev. A. Whaley at St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury, and William A. Frazier, a brother officer of McMahon, officiates as best man.

CRIME PROTEST TO FORT ETHAN ALLEN

WINOOSKI, Vt., April 19.—In an attempt to halt the record of violent deaths in this town within the last few months, citizens held a mass meeting last night, organized a law and order league and appointed a committee of five to secure protection. It was shown at the meeting that there have been three murders and two suicides here within a few months. The murders are charged to members of the Tenth Cavalry stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, two miles away. The meeting voted to protest to the commandant at the fort.

SUING TO OUST WOMAN 'PIPER'

NEW YORK, April 19.—Walter Hampden Dougherty, know on the stage as Walter Hampden, has brought suit for an injunction to prevent the New Theatre Company and Winthrop Ames, its director, from producing "The Piper" with Edith Wynne Matthison or any other woman in the title role.

"The Piper" was written by Josephine Preston Peabody of Cambridge, wife of Professor Lionel Marks of Harvard. It won the Stratford prize in competition with nearly 5,000 other original dramas, and after its presentation in the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon, it was produced with great success at the New Theatre, New York.

Trial of the suit will come Friday before Justice Hendrick. Dougherty asserts that he owns the performing rights for the play for the United States and Canada, and that he has granted to the New Theatre the exclusive right to present "The Piper" in New York until September 1, 1915, and elsewhere in the United States by the regular New Theatre Company during its regular Spring and Fall tour until next Fall, the road rights at that time to revert to Dougherty.

The New Theatre Company, he says, was intended to mean a company of players, none of whom was to be starred or featured, and playing repertory. Furthermore, he alleges, it was not his expectation that the title role would be taken by a woman, the play having been produced with Frank R. Benson, an English actor, in that part.

Despite the fact that at the close of the regular season the New Theatre Company was disbanded, Dougherty says, Mr. Ames and the New Theatre are advertising the play in Baltimore and Washington and starring Miss Matthison.

"Such impersonation," Mr. Dougherty declares, in speaking of Miss Matthison's acting, "prevents a first-class production and performance, because 'The Piper,' while a man of great refinement and large human sympathy, should have a masculine physique and voice. Performance of the role by a woman of ordinary size and height tends to narrow the field from which male actors for other parts in the play can be drawn and to circumscribe the selection of female performers, and this, among other things, prevents a first-class performance of the play."

Mr. Dougherty declares that the contemplated production, with Miss Matthison starred, would ruin the play for further road use.

N. Y. CATHEDRAL OPENED TO-DAY

NEW YORK, April 19.—Thousands gathered to-day on Morningside Heights to witness the impressive ceremonies in connection with the dedication of the Cathedral of St. John the Devine. The edifice, which is to be the costliest and the greatest church building in America, is only partly completed, for the erection of chapels and of other parts of the structure will take nearly seventy-five years.

The greatest assemblage of Episcopalians in American history came to New York for the procession that was to open the dedication exercises. They were marshaled in four columns and, headed by surpliced boy choristers, were to march to the transept singing the processional psalm to the accompaniment of the great organ. The invited clergy of other denominations were given the place next the choristers, followed by the clergy of the Episcopal church, the faculty of the General Theological Seminary and the lay members of the various Episcopal bodies, and with the thirty or more bishops bringing up the rear. Bishop Greer and Suffragan Bishop Burch of New York had places of honor, as did also Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts.

About $4,000,000 has already been expended upon the cathedral, of which the total cost is to be nearly $20,000,000.

PHILLIES TAKE FIRST FROM RUSTLERS 5-3

By R. W. LARDNER.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, April 19.—Before the Rustlers had rubbed the sleep out of their eyes they were beaten by the Phillies in the Patriots' Day morning game. The final score was 5 to 3. Four of the Phillies, runs were made in the first inning before Buster Brown had warmed to his task, and before his mates began to play ball. Brown was wild and ineffective in that first round and his support was wretched. After it was too late, Brown really began pitching and the Tenneyites started playing ball behind him. The locals kept after Fred Beebe, but could not quite catch up.

Tenney used a changed batting order, he himself hitting second, with Goode in fifth position. Scotty Ingerton was out of the game with a sore hand and Arthur Butler, who filled his place, won the unanimous approval of the good sized crowd by his clever all round work. Butler made one bad throw, but looked good in spite of it.

Magee walked, forcing Titus across the plate. Paskert flied to Goode, scoring Knabe. Lobert was caught between second and third, but reached third when Herzog dropped the throw, Magee taking second. Luderus hit to Herzog, who threw home to get Lobert, but Graham failed to tag Lobert and he was safe, Magee taking third. Doolan was safe on Butler's high throw, Magee scoring and Luderus taking third, while Doolan stopped at second. Luderus was caught at the plate on Moran's grounder to Herzog. BASEBALL POOLS LATEST GAMBLE

NEW YORK, April 19.—Gamblers who have lost business because they could not arouse bettors to interest in the running races at Jamestown and Pensacola have turned to baseball with the opening of the season, and already hand book men and others are preparing to drag the great American sport into the betting ring.

Baseball pools, which have been all the "go" in Boston for the past couple of seasons and is not unlike the old-time policy game in the nature of sure thing gambling, and the canvass of business houses and tenement districts to catch the few pennies from office boys, the poor baseball fans, etc., followed by "making book" in the grandstand, is being introduced here.

Hand book men who operate on Broadway, from Forty-sixth street down to Fourteenth, began to take bets on the results of games with the very first contest of the season. The ticket speculators, whom the new ordinances have driven to cover and trouble, have also gone into the business. Enright, the commissioner who handles much money on races and acts for pool rooms here and in Cincinnati, has prepared the most comprehensive scheme of all.

Has Solicitors Out for Clients.

He has solicitors out seeking clients for a weekly pool on the number of runs made by clubs in the American and National Leagues. He has figured out that 1,500 combinations of four clubs of sixteen in the two leagues may be made and a ticket on each of these sold for $1 will bring in $1,500 a week. Here is the list of prizes his solicitors have offered:

First prize on highest total of runs made during six days' play by a combination of four clubs, $300.

Second prize for second highest total made by a combination of four clubs, $100.

Third prize, $50.

Booby prize for lowest number of runs made by a combination of four clubs, $50.

Daily highest score of a combination, $40.

Daily lowest score, $10.

Hunder Per Cent. for Promoter.

Thus the gamblers can pay out only $800 a week out of the $1,500 taken in, that giving them a percentage of between 75 and 100 per cent.

"Maybe there are betters in New York who will like that kind of a game," said a gambler.

"There are more farmers in this city than in any agricultural State in the Union, and such a plan ought to prosper. But when you consider that in faro bank the player has less than one-half of one per cent. against him, and in roulette he has between 5 and 6 per cent. against him, can you imagine how a sane man will prefer to lose his money against such a bank and still keep away from a faro lay-out!"

"WHITE HOPES" TO HAVE BIG CARNIVAL

Come all you white men with ambition to be the "white man's hope." Here's a chance to be selected as the one great fighter in America to be pitted against Jack Johnson, and enjoy the honor ever afterward of bringing the heavyweight pugilistic laurels back to the fold. All men of sound mind, standing six feet high, and weighing at least 190 pounds, are invited to gather at a great "white hope" tournament to be held in New York city, May 26. The general invitation has been formally issued by the National Sporting Club of America. Are you on?

NO MORE COAST FOR LI'L ARTHA

NEW YORK, April 19.—Li'l Artha Johnson will leave Frisco in a few days. He was sentenced to jail for speeding out there, and says that never again will he be seen upon the "Sun Kissed Shores" of California. Artha is through. Last night, over the leased wire, we got a word from him. It follows:

> Tad, New York:
> "I'll leave this place in a few days, and when I do it means good-bye forever. They put me in the hoose gow for speeding, but when I leave I'm going to get me a blind old mule that can't go faster than a walk. I'll walk him down that Main street to the ferry building. I'll walk him on board that boat, and then I'll kiss myself good-bye, you California.
> I am going to Paris. If McIntosh gives me $30,000 I'll fight any one in the world. JACK JOHNSON.

That's the sort of person he is. As we said in a little note the other day, Johnson has been treated rather roughly. He is an expert driver who has never hit anything but a fast pace, yet he's sent to jail and fined $100 besides.

A New York millionaire, while exceeding the speed limit, hit a buggy, kills one of the occupants and injures the other for life. He goes free.

One is a champion prize-fighter; the other is a gentleman of lisure.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 19.—Pitcher "Tiny" Leonard, First Baseman Eddie Wilkinson and Outfielder Norman Lynch of St. Mary's College team left last night for New York to join the New York American League Club.

DELMONT BEATS MONTE ATTELL

Al Delmont took the lead early in his fight with Monte Attell at the Armory A. A. last night and was given a well-earned decision. The North Ender dispelled all doubts about his previous win over Monte Attell. Delmont did not appear as good as in the previous bout, but he won in a manner that left very little room for doubt.

With a trifle more steam behind his blows he might have won early in the contest. Delmont forced the fighting, but there was something lacking that made the contest appear not nearly as good as the first meeting.

Delmont took the lead in the earlier rounds with his constant jabbing to the face and a right-hander to the jaw. The home boxer paid little attention to the body while Attell's whole attack was given over to Delmont's mid-riff and body. Before the contest had gone far Attell had pounded a red spot on Delmont's kidneys. The Californian did not have the better of the argument at any time, however for the faster he boxed the faster Delmont travelled.

In the preliminary bouts Joe White of South Boston defeated Young Jasper of Boston. Billy Corrigan of Cambridge defeated Joe Brown of San Francisco in six rounds, and Martin Conley of South Boston defeated Joe Eagan of the South End in eight rounds. Conley had the bout all the way.

Excessive Smoking
is not so much the number as the kind of cigars.
YOUR doctor says: "Only three cigars a day." He might as well say thirty-three if he doesn't specify the kind. Smoking three strong, black, juice-full, all-Havana cigars is hurtfully excessive for men who could smoke five or six WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigars daily without any excess at all. The reason for this:
Waitt & Bond BLACKSTONE
Cigars (10c) are made of the finest of light, aromatic Havana filler with a filmy, neutral Sumatra wrapper, which relieves the heaviness of the clear Havana. You get the same flavor in the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigar as in the pure Havana cigar, but without its heavy "headiness."
You actually do "cut down on your smoking" when you switch from over-rich, black, clear Havanas to the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE.

WHAT'S YOURS?
Is it one of the many ordinary ales? Is it one of the few good ales? Or is it the ale in a class by itself—
Sterling Ale
Five cents buys all kinds. But if you want to be sure of Sterling for your five cents, add good judgment to your nickel.

MURPHY EASY FOR M'FARLAND

By TAD.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Mr. Peter Prunty, announcer at the Fairmount Club, clambered through the ropes last night just before the major event and after removing his kelly and posing himself in correct announcing attitude chirped: "Gentlemen, we have with us to-night the greatest array of lightweights New York has ever seen."

He then introduced Champion Ad Wolgast, One Round Hogan, Knockout Brown, Freddie Welsh and Abe Attell. Said gentlemen then left the arena and seated themselves.

A few moments later Mr. Patrick McFarland of Chicago (called Packey by those who know him quite intimately) gave afore mentioned warriors a little lesson in the art of boxing. He had for a pupil Flatbush Tommy Murphy, the real estate dealer from the wrong side of the bridge.

It was really a most delightful little lesson. Of course, Packey had to have some one to experiment on and Tommy was selected as the most rugged and good natured.

Packey showed the champion and the other contenders just what the meaning of the different fistic terms were, such as a lead for the face, left block, in-fighting, long range fighting, right cross, left cross, right uppercut and so on right down the list. Murphy didn't object a bit.

Every time that Packey had a new one to lay out Tommy was right there to receive it. He had his head poised properly, his feet spread properly, his arms just in the place they should not have been and so forth. A more perfect exhibition of the manly art has not been seen around these parts.

Mr. McFarland has proven himself the best 135-pounder in this country. If there is another pupil willing to take on the Chicago professor trot him out. Packey has now demonstrated his ability successfully against Cross, Hyland, Moran, Goodman, Keyes, Murphy and Erne. We want another boxer near his type and want him badly.

It was a very nice little exhibition of boxing. The first round like the second and the second like the third and so on, until the tenth. McFarland started off in the lead and was never headed.

THE MARCH OF THE TIRED MEN

By DAMON RUNYON

HAND me the sport page, Roscoe;
where did they close to-day?
Florida, Frisco, or somewhere else
—what do the papers say?
Summer's upon us, partner, and we've
Wintered the bank roll thin—
I'll square with the landlord, Roscoe, if you'll slip me your ring and pin!
Juarez, Norfolk or Jacksonville—
Pimlico, Denver—where?
Load up the cars with the next town stars—
But where will we go from there?

CAN'T you locate a bush date somewhere? Well, the long-haired laws reach far—
A yellow flag floats in the Eastern belt,
with a clamp on the Western bar,
But pack what's left of the baggage, and we'll hunt for a six-day Fair—
Where the neck yokes shoot us with one-case notes—but where will we go from there?
Punktown, Bunktown and Higginsville—
We'll save up the railroad fare—
Bring on the skates for the small time dates—
But where will we go from there?

FAR from the Bright Aisle, Roscoe, with the good dates scattered wide—
Austria, France or the Argentine—where is it the old gang hides?
And they're running some dogs in horse pelts now with a shot in the leg to help—
But hand me the sport page, Roscoe—where are they due to yelp?
Shades of Sheepshead and New Orleans—
Delmar and Hawthorne Fair!
Pack up the junk in the tin-top trunk—
But where will we go from there?

Tragedy of the Aged Women Who Drudge

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WHAT becomes of the destitute old women? There are innumerable lodging houses and missions and bread lines for old men. One of the most baffling problems of every large city is what to do with the old and decrepit men, the tramps, the vagabonds.

But what of the old women? No one seems to hear anything about them. When there are so many charities for the benefit of the aged man, why are there so few for the aged woman?

There are countless dingy lodging houses, where tramps can spend the night for five cents begged from the passer-by. But how few such places there are for women!

I have asked several of the mission and charity workers about what becomes of the old women. They seemed puzzled. They really do not know. Their only answer is that there seems no need of many charities for old women.

But why? There are far more women in all Eastern States than men. So where are all the wives and sisters of these men who fill the bread lines and cheap lodging houses?

A Pathetic Army

The only answer is that women, however old and destitute—WORK! Every night and early morning finds an army of gray-headed, stoop-shouldered women scrubbing the floors of the huge office buildings all over the city.

When they are too old to be hotel maids or work in factories or sweat shops, they do not become tramps and beggars as do the men. But they take up the scrub brush and pail and spend the rest of their days on their knees, scrubbing through untold hours for just enough to keep life in their weary old bodies.

Go through any large building, hotel, apartment, or office, early in the morning, and on every few floors you will find a kneeling figure, a gray head and work-rounded shoulders, bending over the scrub brush. She will draw aside her pail to let you pass, gazing up in a dazed sort of way.

Nothing seems to me quite so pathetic as just the way these poor old woman move their pails and look up at you as you pass.

There is nothing of appeal or supplication in their expression. They have so long been hurried by, unnoticed, that they expect nothing else. They are only a part of the cleaning machinery of the building. No one ever thinks of these kneeling figures as women. And when they look up at you (sometimes they are too weary to even raise their heads), it is only with the dazed blankness of sensibilities dulled by years of misery and want.

And if you stop and slip something into her hand, so unused is she to receive any help that she may be too surprised even to mumble her thanks.

The Picture of a Drudge.

Compare this old woman with the men of her age and class who beg from you on the street and exhaust the city charities. She is self-supporting. She WORKS. She is not a tramp or a supplicant. She does not haunt the missions and bread lines. She is earning her living—however wretched a living it may be. And she is earning it honestly and by the hardest drudgery a woman can do.

And yet she is gray-haired and weak and rheumatic! If she was your mother or grandmother you would think her too old and frail for even the lightest work.

Do you know of anything more deserving of help than this great army of bent-shouldered, gray-haired scrub women?

What can be done for them as a whole? I do not know. I am not a sociologist. I have no new theories for solving the problems of the poor.

But I do know this. If each of you who reads this article would help in some small way the scrub woman who washes up the office in which you work, it would bring a little happiness to a great many pitiful old women whose lives are more wretched than you can know.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

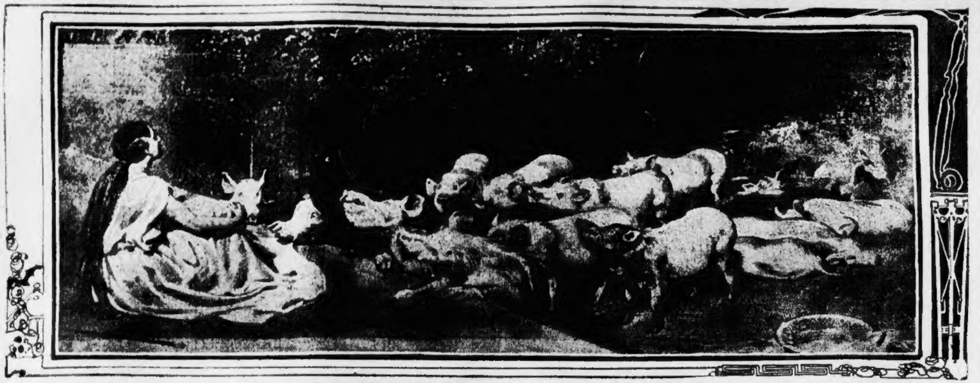
Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. ENDLICH, R. F. D. No. 7 Erie, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory, from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

Without trying it no woman ought to say this medicine will not help her case.

The Lady and the Pigs ☘ ☘ ☘ A Siren of Old

Circe's Wand, Which Made Pigs of Men, Is as Potent To-day as It Was 3,000 Years Ago



Circe and the Friends of Ulysses, from the great painting by Riviere.

Briton Riviere (pronounced Re-vyar, with the accent on the last syllable) was born in London, in 1840. He is one of the greatest animal painters that ever lived. He is a member of the Royal Academy. His masterpiece is "Persepolis," but the painting of Circe, reproduced above, first attracted the world's attention to his genius.

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

THE lady in the picture is not the owner of a stock farm, nor does she run a slaughterhouse.

You will observe that the pigs are running toward her, and that she sits unconcerned, and is not afraid of them. You will also observe that, beside her, lies a little stick or wand.

The lady's name is Circe (pronounced in two syllables, Sur-ce), and the picture represents one of the oldest stories of literature. It has interest, not merely because it is old, but because it is eternally true.

What happened, as shown in this picture, is happening every day in these times, particularly in large cities, where people often act as if what they do is not seen. The result of this kind of action, in olden times, was pigs; the result of to-day is no different.

Here is the story of the lady and the swine, as told in the Odyssey of Homer, the poet, who tramped the hills and vales of Greece (three thousand years ago), and told men truth in wonderful stories after his manner.

II.

Ulysses, wandering from Troy, left Lamos with one ship and forty-four men in the crew. In the course of a few days they came to an island. Ulysses explored the island and saw a cloud of smoke rising from a grove. This discovery led him to send men out as an exploring party. Eurylocus (Eu-ryl-o-cus) led them. They came to a beautiful palace of marble. Wolves and lions roamed about the grounds, tame as kittens and dogs.

When the palace door opened there appeared Circe in her great beauty. She was skilled in pleasant ways, and in the use of drugs. A group of young girls attended her. She invited them in, and all accepted save the leader.

Within were great rooms, beautifully furnished, couches with rare coverings, and everything to please the eye.

The guests were given seats of honor, and a banquet was served, including wine.

Now this wine, mixed with a poisonous herb, made the men forget home and country and family. Circe waved her wand over them and they turned to swine. Then she drove them out into the pig pen.

Eurylocus hastened to tell the story to Ulysses, who went to the rescue of his companions. On the way he met a youth named Mercury, who gave him a Mola flower as a protection against Circe's poisons. When Ulysses arrived at the palace every man, now a pig, was busy feeding from his trough.

The rest of the story is simple. Ulysses was not overcome by Circe's beauty, and he rescued his friends, by making her wave the magic wand over them again. Thus the evil was undone.

III.

The story, as you see, is no fable. The waving wand of Circe is just as potent to-day as ever. Man's desire to partake of strange dishes is still active. The pig is a symbol of more than bacon.

But there is always among us the noble figure of Ulysses—let his name be what it may—who is proof against temptation, who rescues his fellow-men, and tells them how easy it is to be foolish and how foolish it is to be easy.

Now this story, as I have said, is thousands of years old. And yet Circe, and her maids, and her magic wand, are not dead.

There is only one word in this tale that is strange to a reader of to-day. That word is Mola, the charm given by Mercury to Ulysses.

Its modern meaning is Wisdom.

☘ THE WAR IN THE AIR ☘

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

Bert Smallways, an obscure English lad, by mistake is carried up in a runaway balloon and driven by the wind 10,000 feet above the English Channel to Franconia, the aeronautic war park of the German nation.

He has found, by rummaging among the clothes left in the balloon, that it belongs to Alfred Butteridge, the great airship inventor, of whom the Germans were expecting to purchase his great secret. Bert finds the drawing, plans, blue prints and photos of the engine by which Butteridge has solved the last riddle of the air.

The Germans, at first, mistake him for Butteridge and carry him along on Prince Albert's flagship, the Vaterland, to attack New York. When the fleet of one hundred airships is half-way across the Atlantic Bert is discovered to be an impostor and he is sentenced as a spy, but saved by the grace of the Prince and classed as ballast.

Wireless messages convey word to the Vaterland that the German and American sea fleets have met in battle. The air fleet races toward the scene.

When dawn breaks and the men in the airships look down on the sea, they witness a terrible sight. The Barbarossa is a mangled thing of iron, and the decks strewn with dead. Two American ships have been disabled. The American fleet has the German ships at its mercy when Admiral O'Connor discovers the presence of the enemy in the air. At this point Prince Karl orders the air fleet into action.

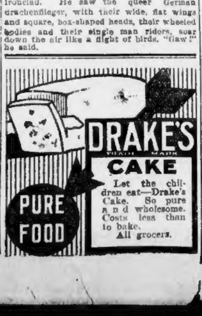
IT is doubtful at what particular time the unlucky American realized the presence of this new factor in the fight. No account now survives of their experience. We have to imagine as well as we can what it must have been to a battle-strained sailor suddenly glancing upward to discover that huge long silent shape overhead, vaster than any battleship, and trailing now from its hinder quarter a big German flag.

Presently, as the sky cleared, more of such ships appeared in the blue through the dissolving clouds, and more, all disdainfully free of guns or armor, all flying fast to keep pace with the running fight below.

From first to last no gun whatever was fired at the Vaterland and only a few rifle shots. It was a mere adverse stroke of chance that she had a man killed aboard of her. Nor did she take any direct share in the fight until the end. She flew above the doomed American fleet while the prince, by wireless telegraphy, directed the movements of her consorts.

Meanwhile the Vogel-stern and Preussen, each with half a dozen drachenflieger in tow, went full speed ahead and then dropped through the clouds, perhaps five miles ahead of the Americans. The Theodore Roosevelt let fly at once with the big guns in her forward barbette, but the shells burst far below the Vogelstern, and forthwith a dozen single man drachenflieger were swooping down to make their attack.

Bert, craning his neck through the cabin porthole, saw the whole of that incident, that first encounter of aeroplane and ironclad. He saw the queer German drachenflieger, with their wide, flat wings and square, box-shaped heads, their wheeled bodies and their single man riders, soar down the air like a flight of birds. "Gaw!" he said.



DRAKE'S CAKE

Let the children eat—Drake's Cake. So pure and wholesome. Costs less than to bake.
All grocers.

One to the right pitched extravagantly, shot steeply up into the air, burst with a loud report and flamed down into the sea; another plunged nose forward into the water and seemed to fly to pieces as it hit the waves.

He saw little men on the deck of the Theodore Roosevelt below, men foreshortened in plan into mere heads and feet, running out preparing to shoot at the others. Then the foremost flying machine was rushed between Bert and the American's deck, and then bang came the thunder of its bomb flung neatly at the forward barbette and a thin little crackling of rifle shots in reply.

Whack, whack, whack, went the quick firing guns of the Americans' battery, and smash came an answering shell from the Furst Bismarck. Then a second and third flying machine passed between Bert and the American ironclad, dropping bombs also, and a fourth, its rider hit by a bullet, reeled down and dashed itself to pieces and exploded between the short torn funnels, blowing them apart. Bert had a momentary glimpse of a little black creature jumping from the crumbling frame of the flying machine, hitting the funnel and falling limply, to be instantly caught and driven to nothingness by the blaze and rush of the explosion.

Smash came a vast explosion in the forward part of the flagship, and a huge piece of metal work seemed to lift out of her and dump itself into the sea, dropping men and leaving a gap into which a prompt drachenflieger planted a flaring bomb.

And then for an instant Bert perceived only too clearly in the growing, pitiless light a number of minute, convulsively active animaculae scorched and struggling in the Theodore Roosevelt's foaming wake. What were they? Not men—surely not men! Those drowning, mangled little creatures tore with their clutching fingers at Bert's soul.

"Oh Gord," he cried. "Oh Gord!" almost whimpering. He looked again and they had gone, and the black stem of the Andrew Jackson, a little disfigured by the sinking Bremen's last shot, was parting the water that had swallowed them into neatly symmetrical waves. For some moments sheer blank horror blinded Bert to the destruction below.

Then, with an immense rushing sound, bearing as it were a straggling volley of crashing minor explosions on its back, the Susquehanna, three miles and more now to the east, blew up and vanished abruptly in a boiling, steaming welter. For a moment nothing was to be seen but tumbled water, and then there came belching up from below, with immense gulping noises, eructations of steam and air and petrol and fragments of canvas and woodwork and men.

That made a distinct pause in the fight. It seemed a long pause to Bert. He found himself looking for the drachenflieger. The flattened ruin of one was floating abeam of the Monitor; the rest had passed, dropping bombs down the American column; several were in the water and apparently uninjured, and three or four were still in the air and coming around now in a wide circle to return to their mother airships.

The Battered Fleet

The American ironclads were no longer in column formation. The Theodore Roosevelt, badly damaged, had turned to the southeast, and the Andrew Jackson, greatly battered, but uninjured in any fighting part, was passing between her and the still fresh and vigorous Furst Bismarck to intercept and meet the latter's fire. Away to the west the Hermann and the Germanicus had appeared and were coming into action.

In the pause after the Susquehanna's disaster Bert became aware of a trivial sound like the noise of an ill-greased, ill-hung door that falls ajar—the sound of the men in the Furst Bismarck cheering.

And in that pause in the uproar, too, the sun rose, the dark waters became luminously blue, and a torrent of golden light irradiated the world. It came like a sudden smile in a scene of hate and terror. The cloud veil had vanished as if by magic, and the whole immensity of the German air fleet was revealed in the sky, the air fleet swooping now upon its prey.

"Whack, bang, whack, bang!" the guns resumed, but ironclads were not built to fight the zenith, and the only hits the Americans scored were a few lucky chances in a generally ineffectual rifle fire. Their column was now badly broken.

The Susquehanna had gone, the Theodore Roosevelt had fallen astern out of the line, with her forward guns disabled, in a heap of wreckage, and the Monitor was in some grave trouble. These two had ceased fire altogether, and so had the Bremen and Weimar, all four ships lying within shot of each other in an involuntary truce and with their respective flags still displayed.

Only four American ships now, with the Andrew Jackson leading, kept to the south-easterly course. And the Furst Bismarck, the Hermann and the Germanicus steamed parallel to them and drew ahead of them, fighting heavily. The Vaterland rose slowly in the air in preparation for the concluding act of the drama.

Then, falling into place one behind the other, a string of a dozen airships dropped with unhurrying swiftness down the air in pursuit of the American fleet. They kept at a height of 2,000 feet or more until they were over and a little in advance of the rearmost ironclad, and then swooped swiftly down into a fountain of bullets and, going just a little faster than the ship below, pelted her thinly protected decks with bombs until they became sheets of detonating flame.

So the airships passed one after the other along the American column as it sought to keep up its fight with the Furst Bismarck, the Hermann and the Germanicus, and each airship added to the destruction and confusion its predecessor made.

Leaving the Tumult.

The American gunfire ceased, except for a few heroic shots, but they still steamed on, obstinately unsubdued, bloody, battered and wrathfully resistant, spitting bullets at the airships and unmercifully pounded by the German ironclads. But now Bert had but intermittent glimpses of them between the nearer bulks of the airships that assailed them.

It struck Bert suddenly that the whole battle was receding and growing small and less thunderously noisy. The Vaterland was rising in the air, steadily and silently, until the impact of the guns no longer smote upon the heart but came to the ear dulled by distance, until the four silenced ships to the eastward were little distant things. But were there four?

Bert could see only three of those floating, blackened and smoking rafts of ruin against the sun. But the Bremen had two boats out; the Theodore Roosevelt was also dropping boats to where the drift of minute objects struggled, rising and falling on the big, broad Atlantic waves.

The Vaterland was no longer following the fight. The whole of that hurrying tumult drove away to the southeastward, growing smaller and less audible as it passed. One of the airships lay on the water burning, a remote monstrous fount of flames, and far in the southwest appeared first one and then three other German ironclads hurrying in support of their consorts.

Steadily the Vaterland soared, and the air fleet soared with her and came round to head for New York, and the battle became a little thing far away, an incident before the breakfast. It dwindled to a string of dark shapes and one smoking yellow flare that presently became an indistinct smear upon the vast horizon and the bright new day that was at last altogether lost to sight.

So it was that Bert Smallways saw the first fight of the airship and the last fight of those strangest things in the whole history of war, the ironclad battleships, which began their career with the floating batteries of the Emperor Napoleon III. in the Crimean War and lasted, with an enormous expenditure of human energy and resources, for seventy years.

In that space of time the world produced over 12,500 of these strange monsters, in schools, in types, in series, each larger and heavier and more deadly than its predecessors. Each in its turn was hailed as the last birth of time; most in their turn were sold for old iron. Only about five per cent. of them ever fought in battle. Some foundered, some went ashore and broke up; several rammed one another by accident and sank.

A Monument of Waste.

The lives of countless men were spent in their service, the splendid genius and patience of thousands of engineers and inventors, wealth and material beyond estimating; to their account we must put stunted and starved lives on land, millions of children sent to toil unduly, innumerable opportunities of fine living undeveloped and lost.

Money had to be found for them at any cost—that was the law of a nation's existence during that strange time. Surely they were the weirdest, most destructive and wasteful megatheria in the whole history of mechanical invention.

And then cheap things of gas and basketwork made an end of them altogether, smiling out of the sky!

Never before had Bert Smallways seen pure destruction, never had he realized the mischief and waste of war. His startled mind rose to the conception; this also is in life. Out of all this fierce torrent of sensation one impression rose and became cardinal—the impression of the men of the Theodore Roosevelt who had struggled in the water after the explosion of the first bomb. "Gaw!" he said at the memory; "it might 'ave been me and Grubb! I suppose you kick about, and get the water in your mouth. I don't suppose it lasts, long."

He became anxious to see how Kurt was affected by these things. Also he perceived he was hungry. He hesitated toward the door of the cabin and peeped out into the passage.

Down forward near the gangway to the men's mess, stood a little group of air sailors looking at something that was hidden from him in a recess. One of them was in the light diver's costume Bert had already seen in the gas chamber turret, and he was moved to walk along and look at this person more closely and and examine the helmet he carried under his arm.

But he forgot about the helmet when he got to the recess, because there he found lying on the floor the dead body of the boy who had been killed by a bullet from the Theodore Roosevelt.

Bert had not observed that any bullets at all had reached the Vaterland or, indeed imagined himself under fire. He could not understand for a time what had killed the lad, and no one explained to him.

The Dead Boy on Board.

The boy lay just as he had fallen and died, with his jacket torn and scorched, his shoulder blade smashed and burst away from his body, and all the left side of his body ripped and rent. There was much blood.

The sailors stood listening to the man with the helmet, who had made explanations and pointed to the round bullet hole in the floor and the smash in the panel of the passage upon which the still vicious missile had spent the residue of its energy.

All the faces were grave and earnest; they were the faces of sober, blonde, blue-eyed men accustomed to obedience and an orderly life, to whom this waste, wet, painful thing that had been a comrade came almost as strangely as it did to Bert.

A peal of wild laughter sounded down the passage in the direction of the little gallery and something spoke—almost shouted—in German, in tones of exultation.

Other voices at a lower, more respectful pitch replied.

"Der prinz," said a voice, and all the men became stiffer and less natural. Down the passage appeared a group of figures. Lieutenant Kurt walking in front carrying a packet of papers.

He stopped point blank when he saw the thing in the recess, and his ruddy face went white. "So!" said he in surprise.

The prince was following him, talking over his shoulder to Van Winterfeld and the kapitan. "Eh?" he said to Kurt, stopping in midsentence, and following the gesture of Kurt's hand. He glared at the crumpled object in the recess and seemed to think for a moment.

He made a slight, careless gesture toward the boy's body and turned to the kapitan.

"Dispose of That," He Said.

"Dispose of that," he said in German, and passed on, finishing his sentence to Von Winterfeld in the same cheerful tone in which it had been begun.

The deep impression of helplessly drowning men that Bert had brought from the actual fight in the Atlantic mixed itself up inextricably with that of the lordly figure of Prince Karl Albert gesturing aside the dead body of the Vaterland sailor.

Hitherto he had rather liked the idea of war as being a jolly, smashing, exciting affair, something like a bank holiday rag on a large scale, and on the whole agreeable and exhilarating. Now he knew it a little better.

The next day there was added to his growing disillusionment a third ugly impression, trivial indeed to describe, a mere necessary everyday incident of a state of war, but very distressing to his urbanized imagination. One writes "urbanized" to express the distinctive gentleness of the period.

It was quite peculiar to the crowded townsmen of that time, and different altogether from the normal experience of any preceding age, that they never saw anything killed, never encountered, save through the mitigating media of book or picture, the fact of lethal violence that underlies all life.

Three times in his existence, and three times only, had Bert seen a dead human being, and he had never assisted at the killing of anything bigger than a newborn kitten.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Little Willie and Why He Turned Handsprings

By KENNETT HARRIS

THE little boy came up reluctantly in response to the nice old gentleman's beckoning finger.

The nice old gentleman scanned him carefully with the aid of the tortoise shell lorgnette that he was in the habit of using for close work, and then breathed a sigh of satisfaction.

"It is you, sure enough," he said. "No doubt about it. Your name is Willie, is it not?"

The little boy giggled.

"Come a little closer," invited the nice old gentleman. "I want to examine your head a little. Hm-m, no; No, there is no apparent injury. How does your head feel, dear child?"

"Feels all right," answered the little boy. "Why?"

"Have you fallen on it lately?" inquired the nice old gentleman. "None of your playmates has been taking a crack at you with a club—what?"

"No, sir."

"I don't think that there's anything congenital," mused the nice old gentleman, "and yet—Willie, what in Tunket got into you a while ago?"

"Nothin'."

"Nothin'? Do you mean to tell me—see here, do you know that I was watching you?"

The little boy looked confused.

Willie's Handsprings

"What made you take top speed up to the drug store block and then back?" inquired the nice old gentleman. "I thought at first that you were going after a doctor; but when you made the turn and come in on the home run you had me guessing—especially when you wound up with handsprings. Were you timing yourself for a record, Willie?"

"No, sir," replied the little boy.

"Why the handsprings?" asked the nice old gentleman, "and why did you roll over and whoop?"

The little boy grinned, but made no reply.

"I suppose it was just a release of pent-up energy, what? Letting off steam. It certainly had an epileptic appearance though. I was on the point of going out to you when you got up and climbed the lamppost and hung by your legs from the ladder bar. A most peculiar proceeding, Willie. Why did you do it?"

"Oh, because," said the little boy, trying to release himself from his relative's detaining clutch.

"Following that, you tried to stand on your head and then began to throw rocks at Mr. McGinnis's real estate sign on the vacant lot, concluding with an imitation of a Fiji war dance. All this without any apparent cause. Only be—cause. You had no companion to dare you to these gymnastics and there was a lack of continuity about them that precluded the idea of a game. I suppose ten cents wouldn't be any inducement to tell me why you acted so? No? Well, I'll have to give it up. By the way, what do you think of our new neighbors?"

"I don't know," replied the little boy. "Say, gramper, I want to go to Clyde's house and see his rabbit."

"In a moment," said the nice old gentleman. "I was saying that we seemed to have some agreeable neighbors, or I was about to say so. The head of the family bowed to me very politely as he passed on the way to the station this morning and his wife appears to be a very affable lady also.

"I regret to say that the little girl with the long curls stuck her tongue out at me, but she is a very pretty little girl. Don't you think she is pretty, Willie? Now what is your candid opinion?"

"Girls ain't any good," evaded the little boy.

What Stimulates Us, Then?

"That's where you make a huge mistake," said the nice old gentleman. "Girls are a great deal of good, in spite of their limitations. They can't run a block and a half in a minute and forty-eight seconds, perhaps, and they very rarely climb lamp posts and dangle from their crossbars upside down; they can't throw stones with a degree of accuracy required to hit a real estate sign twelve feet high by sixteen wide, but they can peek out behind the curtains of the front window and stimulate us men to such feats of skill and activity.

"It is the hope of exciting their admiration that makes us put forth our best efforts. They can't throw handsprings, but they have long curls and—Here, where are you going to, Willie?"

The little boy was at the yard gate.

"I'm going to see Clyde's rabbit," he shouted back over his shoulder.

Claret for Bath

SOUR claret is said to be an excellent thing for the complexion, and it bids fair to be the last thing in baths for the woman who is fond of fads.

The wine bath stimulates the skin, but so few women are able to indulge in such extravagance that it is not likely to be popular; sponging the face in wine is not so expensive, and its benefits are so evident that many women will follow it.

Different kinds of wine may be used for the complexion, either white or red, and sour claret is especially beneficial.

The wine should be applied with a sponge or dabbed on the skin with a soft towel. It acts as a strong tonic, and can be used as such instead of a made-up mixture.

Desperate Desmond

THERE IS THE CUR
CURSES! CLAUDE HAS GOT THE WHOLE BRITISH FLEET ON MY TRACK. I WILL FOIL THEM ALL AND STEAL THE FAIR ROSAMOND YET, EH GOMGOTZ?
YOU TRIED TO STEAL MY SWEETHEART, DID YOU? YOU ARE SURROUNDED, NOW DESMOND, AND YOU CANNOT ESCAPE THESE GUNS
WE ARE SURROUNDED BY BATTLESHIPS, BUT NOW FOR A GREAT RUSE HA, HA, HA
THEIR DIVING IS ALL IN VAIN. THE GUNS ON THE OTHER SIDES OF THE SHIPS WILL SHOOT THEM TO PIECES!
NOW, PAL GOMGOTZ FOR A QUICK DIVE!
WE ARE OUT OF THE ENCLOSURE. BEFORE I TAKE CHANCES WITH THESE OUTSIDE GUNS, I HAVE WORK TO DO IN HERE!
WE DARE NOT SHOOT NOW!
YOU CUR
NOW LET THEM FIRE ON A WOMAN IF THEY DARE. YOU ARE IN MY POWER, ROSAMOND
THE VILLAIN MUST NOT ESCAPE!
WE ARE SAFELY LANDED. MARRY ME, ROSAMOND OR YOU WILL BE DEAD BEFORE YOUR LOVER ARRIVES.
HERSHFIELD

[illegible] against the whole British Navy? None at all, says you. That shows how little you know about Desperate Desmond. He'll find out some way to circumvent Johnny Bull's warships, or he's not the ingenious scoundrel we think he is. We may be wrong, but we'd like to place a small bet that we're not.

It sure looks as if they had him now. Cannons to right of him; cannons to left of him; cannons in front of him. Why, it's worse than the famous charge of the Light Brigade, for there are even cannons to the rear of him. If anybody had taken us up on that little bet, we'd feel very much incinined to hedge.

You'd think all those guns would have scared Desmond to death, but no. He saw at once that not one of the ships would dare to fire for fear of sinking one of the others. Consequently, he was able to dive overboard with impunity. Chief Gomgotz was with him, too, but he doesn't cut much ice except when it comes to the rough stuff.

While Claude and the British sailors are waiting for Desmond to come up again in the same spot where he went down, the villain dives under H. M. S. Awful, which is the flagship of the fleet, and rises to the surface under the guns on the other side. He's safe there, because they can't depress the sixteen-inch guns enough to hit him.

It is the work of but a moment for Desmond to sneak in through a porthole, grab our fair heroine and jump out again into the briny deep. So far, so good, or rather, so bad, but the question naturally arises, how does he expect to get away, with all those high-power guns pointed at him? Have patience, and you shall know the answer.

[illegible] The warship could annihilate Desmond as easy as not, but the gunners dare not fire for fear of hitting Rosamond. The British Empires does not make war on women, unless they happen to be suffragettes, which Rosamond is not. For the continuation of this thrilling adventure, see to-morrow's pictures.

Glass for Shelves

GLASS is an ideal shelfing for a kitchen closet, as it can be kept clean so easily. If this is too costly, paint the shelves white and give a coat of enamel. This is easily scrubbed, and does away with the necessity of papers.

The kitchen cupboard should never be permitted to get untidy, and should be scrubbed out at least every fortnight; the lower shelves oftener.

The range and gas stove quickly show lack of attention. Polish once or twice a week, and in the intervals wipe off frequently with newspaper to absorb grease. A gas stove should have the parts removed and boiled every few days, and the burners should be kept clear with a fine wire or brush.

In the Same Boat

A YOUNG married business man went wearily home Saturday night, only to find unfortunate conditions reigning. His little boy had just been severely punished, and was sitting in the front room. His wife greeted him with a frown.

"I thought you were coming home at some decent time this evening," she said. "What's the use of depending on what you say? Well, you can just wait for your dinner, that's all. What's that on your breath? Do you ever shave? For goodness sake, don't talk to me. Sit down somewhere and keep your muddy feet off that footstool!"

He sank wearily into a chair, and passed his hand over his aching brow. As his eyes were closing, a little grimy hand slipped into his own, and a little tear-stained face looked up at him.

"Well, son, what is it?" he whispered.

"Say, pa," lisped the kid, "don't you wish you and me hadn't married ma?"

The Mystery of a Dancer Who Enthralled a Metropolis

The House With No Address

A Story of Love and Tragedy by E. Nesbit
Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Company

NEVER before had he played so perfectly. And never before had he played on the stage without the accompaniment of the orchestra. For after the first air the orchestra was silent and the sound of the flute alone showered clear birdnotes faster and faster in an air that no one in the audience had heard before. And as the tender gaiety of the air asserted itself again and again through the bird trills and flutings, the spirit of it entered into Sylvia—and the Forest Dance became a dance of youth and Spring and happy love.

In the Sea dance the orchestra supplied only the murmur of a sea far away. The flute, hidden by the shelter, made the music for it. And the music was the love symphony's second movement—doubt, yearning, sadness, regret and longing, beyond words.

Sylvia wove it all into the dance, and it became a new dance, a dance that troubled the hearts of those who beheld it, stirring old memories and the ghosts of forgotten desire.

The Dance of Worship was like nothing she had ever done.

Thrilled in every fibre by the music and by the wild leap of her genius to answer it, Sylvia robed herself for the Salome dance.

She never left much to her dresser—to-night she left nothing. Dusky draperies, gleaming jewels, she put all in its place with fingers that did not tremble but were alive to their tips with conscious mastery of the coming hour. In each of her dances to-night she had gone beyond all that her genius ever taught her to do.

The Salome dance should surpass those last dances, by just so much. To find that she could, without anything that could be called a rehearsal, adapt her dance to Denny's music exalted her with the pride of achievement and the confidence of proved power.

She leaned her hands on her long dressing table and looked at her reflection in the glass. The expression was exactly right—she had caught it at last—the look of the woman tormented by the flame of desire, beaten by the rods of terror and remorse—a woman on whose jeweled brow were heaped the sorrows and despairs of a lost world.

"My!" said her dresser, "you do look awful, Miss. Keep it up. That'll knock 'em!"

"I mean to," said Sandra, smiling brilliantly."

"You do, every time," said the dresser. "But to-night you've done the trick and a bit over. I never heard anything like it. Howling like wild beasts they was. There ain't no one like you, Miss, and never has been. And you deserve it every inch. That's what I say. There's heaps of time; they ain't got the throne on yet. Here's your veil—I suppose we shall be seeing you in a white one with orange blossoms one of these days."

"What makes you say that?" Sandra asked, stock still, with the veil in her hands.

"Well—no offense, Miss, but you keeping yourself so to yourself—of course we know it's because you've got a gentleman that gives satisfaction. And you aren't one of the kind you could think of anything short of marriage about."

"Well," said Sylvia on the impulse of the full moment, "the fact is I am—going to be married, I mean."

"Lor!" said the dresser, overcome by surprise. "If I didn't think so! Well, Miss, I wish you joy, and I do hope it won't be quiet at a registry, and the papers saying, 'Secret Wedding, Dancer Weds Peer.'"

"It won't be that," said Sylvia.

"What I mean is," said the dresser, "I hope we'll all be there to wish you joy, for of all the dear, kind, good ladies. What might his name be, Miss, if I might ask?"

"Mr. Templar, Edmund Templar," said Sandra, and really, if you come to think of it, there seemed no reason why she should not say it.

"Well," said the dresser, "he's a lucky gentleman—that's all I can. There—there's your call, Miss. You go on and knock 'em."

Salome's dismal draperies swished through the narrow passage, and the orchestra called, called, called, in the deep troubled notes of the last movement of the Love Symphony.

How News Spreads

The dresser, when she had laid everything to order, strayed out to chat a little with the stage carpenter, and told him the romantic news, and the name of the fortunate man who was to marry Miss Sylvia.

There was—any way you look at it—no reason why she should not have done so. Sylvia had made no secret of it. The carpenter for his part saw no reason for secrecy.

Thus, before the Salome dance was ever everyone behind the scenes knew Sylvia's beautiful secret—and even the name of her fortunate lover. Dressing rooms, corridors and the green room hummed on the news, like bees on a honeyed flower.

And on the stage Salome was treading the first measure of her dance to the music of the Love Symphony's last movement. She had only heard the airs of it, roughly represented by Denny with flute and violin.

The stately, tragic splendor of it, the fullness of the orchestration, the mastery of the technique, caught her in a web of wonder that he, her poor, dear, lame Denny, should be the master that this music proved him.

But the web broke almost on the instant, to set her free to interpret the music—and almost before the conscious power so to interpret it had crowned her soul with pride and sovereignty, all conscious effort vanished, swept away like a veil in a storm wind—leaving her soul naked and subject before the music's supreme control.

She danced—and her audience were held by her magic, and by the spell that held her. The house was hushed to a breathless rapture of horror and delight.

The gray veils descended—slowly the King and the Queen, the courtiers and the slaves faded away and Salome danced alone among the shadows.

The little ticking sound which warned her that it was time to take the head was, for the first time, heard by the audience. In the swirl and swing of her dance she caught at the head, and whirled it with her in the wild rhythm of her going.

And at the touch of it there came for the first time to her nerves, strung far beyond their natural pitch, the sense of what it was that she was representing.

She had danced the Salome because the management and Uncle Moses told her that she must dance it—and she had said that the wax head was "gruesome," and "horrid," and "creepy." But she had felt these things only with the surface of her soul.

Now in its very depths she felt that she was dancing to express the horrible desire of a woman for a dead man—and that the head she held in her hands was the head of that man who in life had been desired, but whom now no one would ever any more desire.

It may have been the texture of the head that drove this new old thought home to her—it was, as Denny had said, of some material other than wax, a new composition. It was colder than wax, and heavier. Its surface yielded a little to her finger-tips.

A dead man's head, she thought, would feel just like that. She wished Denny had ordered another wax head—she was used to the wax head. This one was too heavy, and she didn't like the feel of it. It was like the India rubber stalks of artificial roses—only colder. She would have one like the other, after to-night.

And all the time her dancing feet twinkled to the passionate tragic rhythm, and the head swayed in her hands to the rush and pulse of the passionate tragic air.

This head was heavier—but it was more inspiring, too. One ought to feel what one was dancing.

The features of the head were masked by the flowing hair and beard, just as the wax head's had been—but there was something about it that made the dance real—real.

Suppose it really were the head of some one she loved—Edmund——. Oh! horrible! —but she caught it to her breast in a transport of imagined anguish—if Edmund had not loved her—and she had really been a dancing girl, and had asked for his head * * * not expecting to get it, and then held it—adored, desired—but still unpossessed in her hands!

She raised the head above her in an agony of almost real emotion—and the music throbbed its agony into hers.

Denny had been right—this was the music for the dance of Love and Death. She was creeping over the stage now, in wide curves, the head cradled in her arms, as a mother cradles a child.

Salome's Triumph

"Ah!" she sighed on a note of incommunicable triumph and despair—and the music drew toward its ending.

The machine ticked like a death-watch in an old wall, and she resigned the head at the right moment—the only act in which her dance resembled any dance that she had ever danced before. The gray veils lifted—and Salome lay, her dance ended, before the feet of Herod and Herodias.

And there was a hush of moments before the applause broke out. They rose in their places—they shouted for her—men clapped and shouted themselves hoarse—women screamed their "bravas" and tore the flowers from their bosoms to throw on the stage.

But Salome would not show herself.

"I am tired," she said.

"They'll shout the house down," said the management, "you must go."

"I won't," said Sylvia; "let them shout."

She dressed quickly and got to her brougham, already heaped with flowers and packets of letters. She had thrown herself back on the cushions, her heart beating almost to the choking point, and the motor was a couple of hundred yards on its roundabout way before she remembered Edmund. She had not seen him. She had not even looked for him.

"Drive back," she said. "I've forgotten something—I mean——"

The chauffeur stopped the car and came to the window.

"If it's the man you spoke to me about," he said, "he was at the theatre an hour ago, asking for Mr. Denis."

"Did he see him?"

"I believe so, ma'am. He stayed a very short time and then went away in a hansom."

"Did you see Mr. Denis?"

"About a quarter of an hour ago, madam. He put one or two packages into the brougham and went off in a taxi."

"Did he say anything?"

"He told me to be very careful of the big parcel, ma'am. It was priceless, he said."

"That'll do," said Sandra. "Home, please, as quickly as you dare."

Why had he asked for Denny? To find out whether she would be alone? Would she find him waiting for her? Or perhaps he had wanted to leave a message for her? Anr had asked for Denny so that she might not be talked about at the theatre? That would be like him.

And if he had done that she would find Denny at home. He would have gone in as usual by Miss Gertrude Steinhart's door, and with her lover's message.

Well, she would be glad—yes, even if it meant that she could not see her lover alone.

Poor Denny—what a brute she had been—to want to get rid of him on the very night of his success! To think of his driving down to Yalding all alone, on the very night when his music had set the crown on her triumphs, the very night when she ought to have had him near her—praising him, thanking him, making his triumph sweet with the sweetness of hers. Decidedly she was glad that Denny would be at home.

Where Was Templar?

She looked out eagerly as the motor turned into the windowless cul de sac at the end of which the garage was. Her lover might be waiting there for her—but he was not.

John Smith ran the motor into its garage, and closed and locked the outer doors, before extinguishing the lights and working the lift for her.

Then he came to the door of the brougham.

"Will you allow me to come in with you, madame, to carry your parcels?" he asked. "And you might be nervous, going into an empty house alone."

Sandra thanked him. "I'm never nervous," she said, and at the word knew that, for the first time in her life, she was. "And I don't think it's necessary, indeed," she added. "I expect Mr. Denny will be there."

"I think not," said John Smith. "I heard Mr. Denis telling the commissionaire at the theatre that he was going away to rest."

"Was that after he saw Mr. Templar?"

"It would be after that, madame."

"But I think we shall find him at home, all the same."

But they did not find him at home. Instead, they found Uncle Mosenthal, back for an hour or two from Germany and his secret business—very cheerful, indeed, uncorking champagne, and quite incoherent with excitement and enthusiasm.

"Ah!" he cried, "you are heaven blessed in the service of such an incomparable danseuse to be. She is prima donna absoluta—goddess over all the goddesses that ever on heaven's floor danced have. Drink, Forrester, drink, mein lieber—drink to the Incomparable Salome."

"It's not Forrester, uncle. It's our new chauffeur, John Smith. It's all right, really."

Uncle Mosenthal turned and looked at the new chauffeur.

"John Smith," he said, and looked very straight into the man's eyes. "I see. Well—Mr. John Smith will be honored to drink your health, my child."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

IT'S SOME WAR DOWN IN SAUGUS

You are reading about the war down in Mexico, but do you know about the war down in Saugus. Saturday a dozen people will be arraigned at Salem charged with trespassing on Kenneth McKeen's property; that's how terrible the Saugus war is becoming. The same dozen signers to a petition asking that McKeen be restrained from fencing his property and closing it as a footpath.

This was started when McKeen bought a four-acre lot in Saugus Centre which had been used for some 150 years as a short cut to the railroad station. McKeen is engineer at the Lynn Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis J. Freeman, whose land abuts that owned by McKeen, told this story:

"The trouble started over a year ago. As far back as last May or June, McKeen declared that we shouldn't cross his land. The path had been open for 150 years so we know he didn't have the right to close it. Last Fall he plowed up the path, but we made a new one. He used to hang around with a shotgun, but he didn't do anything. Sometimes he'd sit down by his hen houses and watch us and finally one day he nailed boards across the opening in the fence. We tore those down.

"Now for two or three months, he'd been coming down here on the 5:30 train every morning and the 10 o'clock at night, to feed his chickens. He sits over at the station and watches people coming across the field and takes their names. Last Summer he used to lie under Mrs. Oliver's trees every night and watch us.

"You see those chicken houses down there," and Mr. Freeman pointed out of the window to several low structures along the edge of McKeen's field. "Aren't they a sight? But we never bothered them.

"We've had a lawyer working on the thing for a couple of months. We had some whist parties and charged an admission fee, and we have had a couple of dances and socials and raised some money, and then every man on the hill here has agreed to stand good for his share of what ever it costs us to get our rights. McKeen is a Salvation Army man, and a sort of a noticeable Christian, but I notice he doesn't take pains to act like one."

JUSTICE IN JAIL WILL WED GRATIS

ATLANTA, April 19.—"Tell the boys to bring up the girls while I am idle, and I will tie the knot for them gratis." This is the notice sent out by C. J. Meadowes, Justice of the Peace, who was convicted in Coffee County on the charge of running a blind tiger, and who is now spending thirty days in jail in payment for his transgression of the laws he was elected to enforce.

He will have to hurry, however, for Governor Brown has been called on by the Grand Jury to remove him from office. His decision is expected in a few days.

MAYOR GUEST OF AUTO OPERATORS

By J. C. KERRISON.

The first annual dinner of the Massachusetts Automobile Operators' Association, held at the Quincy House last evening, proved a red-letter event in the history of the organization. Most of the membership was present and entertained as guests Mayor Fitzgerald, Senator Tolman, Colonel Sohier of the Highway Commission, President Gilmore of the Bay State Automobile Association, Lewis R. Speare of the A. A. A., President Hubby of the Lowell Chauffeurs' Association, Charles Pollock of New York, and Harry Grant, the winner of the Vanderbilt.

President J. Edward Connors of the association presided until the post-prandial exercises, when he introduced Hon. J. Albert Brackett, an honorary member of the association, as the toast-master. Mr. Brackett said some nice things about the association, its members and their work, and introduced the different guests as speechmakers, all of whom took occasion to compliment the association and its members upon the high standard that has been attained as the result of the work of the organization.

Important amendments to the New York automobile law have been proposed by Senator White, chairman of the Senate committee on internal affairs. The bill, as drawn up, prohibits all persons under sixteen years of age from driving motor vehicles. The present law permits persons under eighteen years of age to operate automobiles if accompanied by a duly licensed operator or chauffeur, but the proposed amendment eliminates this feature.

The proposed amendment provides that the owner of motor cycles shall be licensed and the motor cycles shall conspicuously display their number-plates.

Sales-manager Norman A. Hawkins, of the Ford Motor Company, spent yesterday in Boston as the guest of Charles E. Fay, the local manager of the Ford. Mr. Hawkins has visited almost every Ford branch in the country and is therefore most conversant with general business conditions. He made an interesting talk on matters in general, saying that Ford business is decidedly good, which is demonstrated by the fact that every fifth car sold in the country is a Ford.

He says that in Nebraska he found that twice as many Fords were being sold as any other one car. In Iowa he found every fourth car sold was a Ford, and in Alabama every third car sold was a Ford. 1911 he considers is a banner year, but it is by no means as big a year as 1912 will prove.

Sales-manager Robinson of the Locomobile Company of Bridgeport, Ct., was another visitor to Boston yesterday. He, in company with Kenneth M. Blake, the local manager of the Locomobile visited the site of the new "Loco" building on Commonwealth avenue, inspected the work and arranged for considerable of the interior decoration.

The company anticipates being in its new salesroom by the first of July next, when it is believed that Commonwealth avenue will become more important in the local motor world than it is at the present time.

TAFT OPENS EXHIBIT FOR NEWBURYPORT

NEWBURYPORT, April 19.—The Newburyport Industrial Exposition held by the Business Men's Association was opened at 8 o'clock last night by President Taft. The President at Washington pushed a button connected with the Western Union telegraph system and started the machinery going and turned on the lights. Governor Foss, in his opening speech, urged the dredging of a deep channel in Newburyport harbor and of the Merrimac River as far west as Lowell. He predicted the shipping industry of the city would soon be revived.

NAMES HER TWINS PAUL AND REVERE

BROCKTON, April 19.—Twins born to Mrs. James Mackedon at her home on Winthrop street have been named Paul and Revere, in honor of the patriot who warned the Middlesex farmers of the approach of the British in April, 1775. One of the babies is a boy and the other a girl. When weighed shortly after birth the little ones tipped the scales at nineteen pounds.

CAPITULAR TRIANGLE NOW IN ST. PAUL ARCH

International fraternity displayed its strength in the Masonic temple, when St. Paul's R. A. chapter received at the hands of Carnarvon chapter of Montreal the capitular triangle, an emblem of the rite. Five hundred attended the convocation and saw High Priest Kavanagh of St. Paul's receive the emblem from First Principal Burket of Carnarvon.

STOCKS UP IN WALL STREET

WALL STREET, April 19.—Closing—Stocks in Wall Street closed with a good-sized rally to-day. A selling movement which started shortly after 2 o'clock was quickly followed by short covering and under the leadership of Missouri Pacific prices closed at the top for the day.

The market was dominated by Missouri Pacific influences during the entire session, and many guesses were proffered as to who would finance the Missouri Pacific's needs. The most likely one is that Speyer & Co. are likely to be the bankers to fill in the breach, now that the Kuhn-Loeb interests had practically withdrawn their support. In fact, it is expected that James Speyer will become a director of the company.

Missouri Pacific after running off almost a point spurted 3 points from the low. Amalgamated broke 60, but was among the leaders in closing dealings with recovery to 61⅜. Copper in London was heavy again, declining 2s.6d. for both spot and futures.

London was again a considerable buyer of stocks. There was liquidation at the opening, but it did not extend very far. The effect of the Missouri Pacific episode has now spent itself and the Mexican situation is no longer looked upon as being a menace to the situation. There is no doubt but that the public's speculative account is reduced to an abnormally small amount, probably the smallest since 1897.

National Biscuit came in for a 3-point spurt and Steel shares were favored with a 1¼-point advance from the early low. The Iron Age will say this week that the most important thing in the steel trade at the moment is the fixing of lower prices for the current year. General opinion favors a reduction of 50 cents per ton in Lake Superior prices.

OPPONENT OF BIG COPPER MERGER DEAD

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., April 19.—Thomas L. Chadbourne of Houghton, Mich., former counsel for the Calumet & Hecla Copper Mining Company and one of the large stockholders in this company, died suddenly at his Winter home in this city of heart failure. He was seventy years old and had retired from active business. Chadbourne was for many years general counsel for the Calumet & Hecla Copper Company and had offices both in Boston and in Houghton, Mich. During the recent merger proceedings Mr. Chadbourne was one of the leading opponents.

PATRIOTIC PILGRIMS VISIT BUNKER HILL

From thirty-five towns in Massachusetts 3,700 members of the Epworth League gathered at the Bunker Hill Monument this afternoon. This is the day for their historic pilgrimage to Bunker Hill in connection with their annual convention. A two-and-a-half-hour tour was made to many interesting places, among which were the navy yard at Charlestown and a visit to the warships, the Old North Church and the homes of many celebrated Americans in that section. The convention opened at Trinity M. E. Church, Charlestown. In the evening an address is to be delivered by President Hamilton of Tufts College. The convention will close with a song to the flag by the entire assemblage.

MISSING WOMAN IS FOUND IN HOSPITAL

SPRINGFIELD, April 19.—Mrs. Bertha E. Slattery, strangely missing for more than a week from the home of her husband, James Slattery, a prosperous farmer in Agawam, is in the Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, where her identity was not learned until yesterday, and after she had been a patient in the institution for about a week. She suddenly left home a week ago yesterday. She is twenty-one years old and has been ill ever since the birth of her little son five months ago. It is believed that her mind has been temporarily affected.

DIGNIFIED JUDGES ROOTERS AT GAME

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Supreme Court Justices Lurton, Day and Harlan finished their duties at the Capitol in time to attend the baseball game between the Highlanders and the Senators. The three justices got seats well down in front in the grand stand, just behind the press table, where they could see all that was going on. From start to finish they manifested a lively interest in the contest, and occasionally one or the other of the elderly and dignified looking jurists ventured into the dialect of the diamond. "Gracious! What a wallop!" exclaimed one of the trio when Conway knocked a three-bagger into deep right field.

AT THE

HENRY F. MILLER PIANO WAREROOMS

395 BOYLSTON ST.

We show a very attractive stock of new and second hand pianos, of our own and other makes, all marked in plain figures at rock bottom prices.

Our appeal is to the careful, thinking buyer—the buyer who knows that the widely advertised piano-selling "plans," "contests" and "sales" are only schemes used by dealers as a means to escape the pressure of fair competition.

We have at our warerooms no cheap pianos marked at high prices, upon the purchase of which we apply "certificate" discounts—certificates which had previously been given away for nothing.

Come to our warerooms and see the pianos we offer at from $175 to $275 (on easy terms, $10 down and $5 per month); compare them with the pianos urged upon you by "canvassers" and "certificate" selling schemes at higher prices. If our offerings are not better in every way, we will confess our 50 years' experience in manufacturing and selling pianos has gone for naught. We have so conducted our business since its establishment in 1863 that today it stands for integrity, responsibility and keen but honorable competition. We shall continue to invite the public's patronage upon that basis as long as we stay in business.

How Do Men Think?

What IS Thought—Life's Great Mystery

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

We human beings possess just two things—this earth with its material wealth and material forces, AND THOUGHT.

With the earth for a basis, and thought the developer and improver, we have acquired all our wealth.

We owe as much to that mysterious power called thought as we do to the earth itself with all its wealth.

What was man without the thinking power? He was a feeble, defenceless, hopeless creature, too weak to fight the big animals, too slow to catch the fleet animals. ONLY THOUGHT COULD SAVE HIM.

Thought taught him to make the pit with the sharp stake at the bottom. The rhinoceros, the mammoth, the bear, fell into the trap, were caught and killed, by human THOUGHT.

Thought taught man to make the bow with its arrow fleeter than the flight of the deer, able to overtake a flying bird on the wing.

Thought gave primitive man the bow and arrow that could kill at a hundred yards.

Thought gives modern man the repeating rifle that kills within the second, a mile away.

Thought will give real men of the future a civilization that will need no arrow and no rifle.

Put your thought upon THOUGHT ITSELF. What have you got that you do not owe to thought?

The coal was in the mine. Only thought could get it out and make use of it for power.

The ocean is full of water. Only thought could change it into steam and run the engine that moves the train.

Thought changes the sheep's wool into the cloth upon your back, the cotton's fleece into the shirt or sheet.

Thought is a cannibal and lives upon thought. Your thought is fed by other thoughts bound up in books.

Thought breeds thought. The spoken thought of your friend starts and stimulates your own thinking.

Niagara's power, PLUS thought, is changed into electric light, moving machinery, flying electric cars.

WHAT IS THOUGHT?

We do not pretend and shall not try to answer that question. It is as old as man.

The savage, thinking in a dull way, slept at night and found his dreams a mass of thought, distorted, strange, unreal. From those thoughts came his ideas of ghosts and devils, and of innumerable gods, kind or wicked—at least, so scientific men tell you.

HOW do men think? We know that there are in nature certain material forces that we call light, heat, electricity, magnetism, etc. All of them might be classed under one word, MOTION. When things stand still, to our eyes, one condition prevails, which we call "inertia." When there is movement our mind tells us that force is at work. A stone falls to the earth, and we recognize the force of gravitation.

A tree is struck, riven and scarred. We point to the force of electricity.

Some of the wisest men believe that there is in the universe only one force, which appears in various shapes.

In thought our minds see many divisions, many mental forces at work. In the great soldier we think we see the fighting force, in the painter or poet, artistic thought; and Arkwright's brain, that gave us the spinning jenny to clothe our bodies, we call the inventive thought.

May it not be that there is only ONE kind of thought, ONE great thinking force, complex, infinite in power, which works through us little human beings here, producing certain little results here, and greater results through glorious intellects on greater planets, or on great suns?

Consider the mystery and the many manifestations of what we call electric force.

You have ONE wire bringing that force from the power house.

You turn the force into one kind of a machine and get HEAT, which warms your room, cooks your food.

You turn the same force into another kind of a machine and it keeps your refrigerator at the FREEZING point.

The same force runs the printing press that prints your newspaper, and gives you the LIGHT by which that newspaper is read.

And the same force on the telephone wire carries your voice a thousand miles, flashes a message through space without wires to save the passengers on a sinking ship, or runs the Edison phonograph with which this editorial is written.

May it not be that to all of the little minds on this earth there is fed a certain universal current of thought, producing different results, as the brains through which it passes are different?

In one brain the power of thought is transformed into a beautiful picture of some noble, philanthropic act. In another brain that thought becomes inventive. In a distorted brain, malformed, it produces violence, even murder.

The problem of the engineer who uses the electric current is to MAKE BETTER MACHINES through which that current may act. He has the perfect current in quantities unlimited. His car may go ten miles an hour, a hundred or a thousand miles. The power will do it if the machine be right.

Humanity is the engineer, whose business it is to utilize here the earth's power of thought, the cosmic force that regulates the universe.

Is it not our task on this earth to produce better brains, BETTER THINKING MACHINES, through which the perfect power of force may work?

Is this a mechanical suggestion, lowering the plane of humanity? Not at all. For the quality of the brain in the child depends upon the love of the father and the mother, upon the father's moral character, and the mother's maternal devotion.

Nothing could be more inspiring than the thought that mankind is to work out its problems through affection, through goodness, creating through the highest conceivable moral human relationship the perfect brain through which perfect universal thought may act.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

CHICAGO'S PLAN TO WIPE OUT VICE

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE position taken by the commission that has recently reported on vice conditions in Chicago is distinguished by a definiteness and a chivalrous high-mindedness that will certainly give courage to the hearts of those who are seriously seeking to improve similar conditions elsewhere.

It will, at the same time, convict of moral cowardice all of those everywhere who are willing to let things remain about as they are because there is so little chance of making them much better.

The bettering of such conditions in our own city has been permanently hindered by that apathetic and morally lazy class of people who oppose all efforts to abate the social evil on the ground that it has always existed and always will, although with some of these it is not quite as much due to cowardice as to the personal inconvenience which they would suffer were there no such evil in existence.

On the part of the ethically timourous, therefore, there is no effort made to deal with the thing radically, only a shamefaced suggestion that it should be regulated, or that it should be segregated, which means glossing it over with a tincture of respectability by securing for it a semi legal indorsement: not that the State would exactly elevate it to the dignity of a virtue, but temporize with it to the extent of promising not to record it in the category of crimes.

We Do Not "Regulate" Murder. Why the Social Evil?

It is never proposed to "regulate" murder, although murder has always existed—at least as far back as to the days of Cain—and probably always will. Nobody suggests that a section of the city should be set apart for the occupation of thieves and the perpetration of thievery, although "there has always been stealing and probably always will be."

These people do not care to commit murder, and therefore want that it should be recognized as crime and dealt with accordingly. They do not care to steal, and therefore believe in having it recognized as crime and treated as such.

Why do they not want the social evil handled in the same way?

Ask them, and keep asking them, till they tell you the truth. Contrast with all that lackadaisical and maudlin spirit the moral assertiveness of the Chicago commission, a commission, by the way, that is not composed simply of ministers—that impractical coterie of divines that are too heavenly-minded to appreciate earthly conditions—but composed of men in business, journalism and representatives of all the professions.

There is, on their part, no temporizing or playing with the situation. They face it with a frankness that, to the lily-livered, might seem to be audacity. It is not apologized for on the ground that it has its roots in a "pardonable humanness."

There is no proposition to regulate it or segregate it, or to convert one part of Chicago into heaven by making hell of the other part.

The note of the commission is "constant and persistent repression," and that, too, not with the mere purpose of making things a little less bad, but "WITH ABSOLUTE ANNIHILATION AS THE ULTIMATE IDEAL."

There is a ring in that note that is simply fascinating and exhilarating to any man that has, in his soul, moral chords that are not so stiffened and rusted as to refuse to vibrate.

The Trouble Between the Warring Races in Mexico

It is unfortunate for any country to have its population composed of irreconcilable elements. We have learned to know what that means from the relation sustained to one another by the whites and the colored people in our own country.

The negroes are constitutionally in possession of the right of suffrage, but are practically denied its exercise, and no effective movement could be initiated looking to securing to them what technically belongs to them; nor, on the other hand, would any one be so venturesome as to suggest the repeal of those amendments to the Constitution by which suffrage became the black man's prerogative.

The situation is an unjust and discreditable one, but nobody is wise enough to suggest the means for its correction.

The difficulty in which we are thus involved is similar to the one which President Diaz is having to face in Mexico. While the whites and the Indians of that country are not as sharply separated from each other, socially, as the whites and the colored are with us, yet, on the part of the Indians there is something of the same incompetency from a civic point of view as is true of the negroes.

It may be that we blundered fifty years ago when we admitted the negroes to citizenship: but we did admit them, and our attitude ever since has been a lie and a fraud.

In like manner the Spaniards do not dare to UNDO what they have done; nor, although in the minority, will they allow the EXECUTION of what they have done.

The fact that the Indians are kept out of their constitutional rights is the war-cry of the insurgents. To deny their demands means keeping alive, indefinitely, the existing contention. To yield to those demands is to imperil and perhaps to wreck the prosperity of the country.

It Is No Quarrel in Which We Can Interfere

We can only pity poor old Diaz that he has fallen upon days that are so full of impossible difficulty. The Mexicans will best be left to solve their own problems. There are some lessons that each nation has to learn for itself.

It can never be the business of the United States so to interfere as to be found siding against the Indians in their efforts to secure what already constitutionally belongs to them.

The Red Corpuscle

By WEX JONES

JAMES SCHOOLCRAFT, of Orient Heights, asks us how the proposal to mail the Congressional Record to subscribers for $1 a year is regarded by the Red Corpuscle's staff of editors. Mr. Schoolcraft thinks that the Record would cut into the Corpuscle's circulation. However, our editors entirely disagree with him. Action is the mainspring of the Red Corpuscle; talk is all that appears in the Congressional Record.

PIRATE GOLD.

A Romance of Buried Treasure and Its Wonderful Recovery.

Jim Smith picked up the old spyglass and, attempted to look through it. He could see nothing.

Investigation showed that the glass was obscured by a piece of paper.

When the paper, yellowed with age, was spread out on the table, Smith traced on it the faded outline of a map. In one corner was written, "Chart of Doubloon Island, where the loot is hid."

Examining the spyglass carefully, Smith found engraved on it, "Captain Kidde, His Spyglass."

This satisfied him that he was really on the trail of buried treasure.

Two months later the schooner Discovery slipped out of Boston Harbor, bound for Doubloon Island.

Jim Smith and five other Jarvard men made up the crew. The cook was a Chinaman called Kum Down. He had a guileful expression, and when Smith one night caught him trying to cut the throat of one of the sleeping crew, the skipper of the Discovery began to suspect Kum Down was an undesirable character to have aboard the schooner.

The Discovery was running past Gallup's Island when the lookout, who happened to be awake for some reason or other, reported that a Chinese junk was off the weather bow. Kum Down was seen signaling to the other vessel, so he was placed in flatirons. As the junk came closer it was apparent that she was manned by seventy-five ferocious hatchet men. Jim Smith looked the situation over, and decided to stall off the attack until the next number of the Red Corpuscle.

Got beaten up as follows:
  Two black eyes and a broken rib,
  And a nose that looked like a bursting squib—
For which he received two dollars.

On one of our lovely April days a Scotchman went out in a kilt;
Now he sits with his feet in hot water, with his shoulders wrapped in a quilt.

A man felt a hand on his wallet,
  And said, "This is far from nice;
A 'dip' must be picking my pocket,
  Or my head must be filled with vice."
